Daugherty and Three District Attorneys Were To Benefit Through Glass Casket Case.

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

New York, March 7.—A federal grand jury today indicted three persons for obstructing justice and attempting, for a price of $65,000, to induce United States Attorney General Daugherty and other government prosecutors to protect men who since have been sentenced for using the mails in a fraud which netted $75,000.

The indicted were Thomas B. Means, a well-known law partner of the Georgia Society of defense counsel in several big liquor cases; Gaston B. Means, a former agent of the department of justice, and Elmer Jarnecke, secretary to Means.

Means, Jarnecke and nine others are indicted last October for using the mails to defraud and engaging in a conspiracy through which 512 cases and 12,000 barrels of whisky were removed from licensed distillers and diverted into bootleg channels. Jarnecke is Means' attorney in this case.

Casket Men Claim.

Today's indictments charge the trio with having received $65,000 from officers of the Cramer System, Inc., and the Glass Casket company of Atlanta, Pa., of whom 17 since have been sentenced for obtaining $175,000 in an alleged fake stock promotion scheme conducted through the mails.

These besides Attorney General Daugherty whom the accused are alleged to have promised to bribe, include United States District Attorney Hayward and two of his assistants, John Holley Clark, Jr., and Peter J. McCoy.

The chief complainants against the indicted trio were Samuel Safir and others of the Cramer System and Glass Casket company, who were sentenced in terms ranging from a day to two and one-half years in federal and county institutions, after forty persons indicted with them had been acquitted of charges against them dismissed.

In addition to promising Safir and his co-conspirators immunity from

COMER MERCHANT,
BROKE, ENDS LIFE
WITH PISTOL SHOT

Comer, Ga., March 7.—(Special.) James E. White, 40, of this place, committed suicide late Thursday night by shooting himself through the head while his wife and four children were eating supper.

He was one of the leading merchants of Comer for a number of years, but went into bankruptcy a little more than a year ago. Since that time he had been in a nervous condition, relatives say.

He is survived by his widow, four children, two brothers, W. E. White, of Comer, and L. A. White, of Florida, and two sisters, Mrs. O. T. Patton and Mrs. W. J. Carithers, both of Comer.

DEATH IN BLAZE;
BOY IS INJURED

Clothing of Mrs. J. L. Glass, 86 Years Old, Catches Fire From Small Gas Stove.

Mrs. J. L. Glass, 86 years old, of 403 Whitehall street, was burned to death, and 3-year-old Roland Gray Smith, of 107 Jefferson street, narrowly escaped the same fate Friday afternoon.

Mrs. Glass, who was at home alone, vainly tried to smother her blazing clothing with bedclothing, which became ignited by the flames. The smoke and fire attracted neighbors and Call Officers M. C. Williams and Fred L. Tippen, who were passing at the time. Mrs. Glass was found, burned beyond recognition, by the officers when they rushed in.

Her clothing is supposed to have caught fire from a small gas stove in the room. A coroner's inquest is to be held over the body Saturday at the chapel of Harry G. Poole.

The little Smith boy sustained serious burns about the hands when he scratched a match over a kerosene can which had tilted in his hands.

The little boy was on the back porch at the time, his mother having left him just a minute before to go into the dining room.

Attracted by his screams, she smothered the blaze with her coat and hurriedly summoned the Grady ambulance. Doctors stated that the burns were not dangerous.

Chicago, March 7.—Boiled by rides to jail in non-union taxicabs, women garment workers on strike here who had been arrested, protested to Mayor Dever Friday.

"We don't mind being arrested, but we don't want no rides to the house of detention in non-union cabs," one of the delegation told the mayor. Dever promised redress.

Senator Curtis Identified by Ira Bennett As the "Principal" in Code Telegram.

DAUGHERTY'S NAME ALSO BROUGHT OUT

Attorney General Authorized "Comfort" Telegram to McLean, Publisher's Editor Says.

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

Washington, March 7.—Testimony directly linking Attorney General Daugherty with the effort to prevent the recalling of Edward B. McLean to the witness stand was given today before the oil committee.

Ira E. Bennett, an editorial writer on The Washington Post, testified the attorney general had told him on the day McLean was summoned to Washington to tell the publisher "not to worry." Mr. Daugherty was quoted as saying that he was "attending to things."

Bennett also told the committee that Senator Curtis, Kansas, the assistant republican leader in the senate, was the man mentioned as the "principal" in one of the telegrams sent to McLean at Palm Beach. Later Senator Curtis issued a statement, however, contradicting several points in that story, and declaring he had had no communication with the McLean agents which would make it possible for them to refer to him as the "principal" or in any other way than in his own name.

Curtis to Deny Under Oath. Tomorrow the Kansas senator will take the witness stand to make his denial under oath. Bennett then will be recalled and asked to a further explanation.

In his testimony today the witness insisted that the reference to the "principal" did not relate to President Coolidge, as suggested by some democratic senators, and it was announced at the white house that Mr. Coolidge did not recall any conference with Bennett since the oil issue became acute.

Throughout a long cross-examination repeated efforts were made to

SHOTS OF DEATH
AS WEDDING BELL

Man Shoots Wife and Self as Another Couple Marry in Room Below. Neighbor Drops Dead.

Fort Smith, Ark., March 7.—Grim death stalked a wedding ceremony here tonight, beckoned two lives beyond the veil and then took up watch in a hospital where a third life was suspended by a slender thread.

Tragedy first was written in a boarding house when R. W. Stewart entered his wife's room and attempted to settle their marital difficulties with a pistol. Mrs. Stewart was shot in the face and has only a slight chance for recovery, hospital attendants said.

After shooting his wife, Stewart turned the pistol upon himself, inflicting a fatal wound. Downstairs a young couple were saying their vows in the marriage ceremony. The tragedy enacted without warning above their heads caused panic among the wedding guests. Mrs. Rebecca King, 95-year-old invalid, lived next door to the boarding house. She fainted during the excitement and died twenty minutes later. Stewart and his wife had been estranged for some time and Mrs. Stewart was living in the boarding house with a niece. The niece witnessed the shooting.

BLIMP IS PILOTED IN STRAIGHT PATH
BY RADIO SIGNALS

Dayton, Ohio, March 7.—For the first time in history, airships have been guided from one point to another by means of radio. This was accomplished at Wilbur Wright field yesterday when Captain W. H. Murphy, McCook field, and Lieutenant R. E. Robillard, of the post lighter than air section, piloted the blimp OB-1 in a straight course by means of radio signals, it became known today.

CZECHO-SLOVAKIA
IS IN HOT WATER
FROM ITS 'TEAPOT'

London, March 7.—Dispatches from Prague these days sound a lot like dispatches from Washington.

The latest news of Czecho-Slovakia's "Teapot Dome" is that authorities believe they are getting to the bottom of the scandal, and that it is reported sensational revelations will be forthcoming, according to a Central News dispatch from Prague.

It is also insinuated that the revelations will involve highly placed persons.

A new angle has been given the investigation of charges that officials of the ministry of defense in Czecho-Slovakia are involved in a plot to buy gasoline from a Rumanian company at more than the market price. It is now alleged that high army officers were bribed to accept an inferior, diluted gasoline, which caused a number of serious crashes of army airplanes.

GEORGIA SOLONS
TO PUSH PROJECT
OF NATIONAL PARK

Two Members of Special Commission To Select Appalachian Site Are Yet To Be Named.

Washington, March 7.—(Special.) Members of congress from Georgia will get behind a movement to have the proposed Appalachian National park located in the mountains in the northern part of the state, which they believe they can show is the most ideal section of the entire Blue Ridge range.

Representative Gordon Lee, who since 1911, has been a member of the national forest reservation commission, which has supervision over all forest reservations, said Friday that he intends to push for the location of the park in Georgia, when the special commission appointed to study the project begins its work.

Representative Lee introduced a bill in the house last year for the creation of a national park in northern Georgia. He says he will not push it at this time, but will endeavor to have the special commission locate the proposed park in the state, in which movement he will receive the cooperation of other members of congress from Georgia.

Commission Not Organized. The commission which will study the project has not yet become fully organized. Two members remain yet to be selected. It is headed by Representative Temple, of Pennsylvania, long interested in such projects. The other two members already chosen are Major W. D. Welch, general manager of the Palisades interstate park of New York and New Jersey and Colonel Glenn S. Smith, topographical engineer of the United States Geological Survey. The other two members are to be selected from the council of national parks, forests and wild life, which has its headquarters in New York city.

The other two members are expected to be appointed within the next few days, and the commission will

Germany's Envoy
To Japan Picked
For Post in U. S.

Berlin, March 7.—It is learned that the government has arranged for Wilhelm Solf, German ambassador to Tokyo, to succeed Ambassador Wiedfeldt as German ambassador in Washington.

Solf has just arrived here from Tokyo. He is 62 years old, a large, good natured and democratic man who the government hopes will make an excellent representative at Washington.

He was formerly German governor of Samoa, and later served as colonial secretary. In politics he takes a middle course, leaning neither to the ultra-radicals nor the ultra-reactionary group.

Rumors that Ambassador Wiedfeldt would resign or would be recalled from Washington arose after the "flag incident" when the German embassy in Washington delayed in placing its flag at half mast in tribute to Woodrow Wilson.

MENACING CALM
WARNS OF STORM
OVER DAUGHERTY

Rumblings of Plans for Investigation Break From Clouded Sky of Attorney General.

SENATE WILL BEGIN ITS PROBE NEXT WEEK

White House Is Silent and Cabinet Officer Keeps Still—No New Shafts Are Launched.

Washington, March 7.—The storm which had been expected to attend the return to the capital today of Attorney General Daugherty failed to break and outwardly tonight there was a dead calm in the controversy over his retention in the cabinet.

Underneath the calm, however, there were rumblings which were accentuated by further steps by the senate committee which expects early next week to begin its investigation of Mr. Daugherty's administration of the department of justice. The committee issued subpoenas for half a dozen witnesses but in accordance with the policy previously decided upon did not disclose the line of testimony expected from those to be called.

The white house was silent, Mr. Daugherty was silent and his critics in the senate produced no fresh attack to mark his return after a nine-day trip to Chicago and to Florida.

Arriving in the capital about half an hour before the Friday cabinet meeting, Mr. Daugherty went directly to the white house to attend a meeting of President Coolidge's official family at which all present afterward agreed the controversy raging about the attorney general was not mentioned. He spent the remainder of the day studying precedents to determine whether the department of justice could legally meet the request of the house for the names of the two representatives charged by a Chicago grand jury with misuse of their influence.

The attorney general was met at the station by two secret agents of the department of justice and his only word to waiting newspapermen was that he was feeling better than he had in five years. He appeared in better health than when he left Washington suddenly a week ago Wednesday, and after the cabinet meeting displayed little of the nervousness that marked his last attendance at a cabinet session.

Answers One Question. Many were the questions directed at the attorney general on leaving.

DAUGHERTY FACES
CONTEMPT CHARGE

Longworth Threatens Steps To Force Attorney General To Name Congressmen in Charges.

Washington, March 7.—Unless Attorney General Daugherty gives the house of representatives the names of the two suspected congressmen within a reasonable time, contempt proceedings will be instituted, Majority Leader Longworth stated Friday night. There were intimations previously that Daugherty would decline to reveal the names of the two congressmen prior to the grand jury investigation here.

Longworth said he believed twenty-four hours would be a "reasonable time," indicating that action would be taken Monday if the names had not been pronounced by that time.

Previously Representative Langley, of Kentucky, had stirred the house with a dramatic speech defending himself against gossip which has been whispered here for several days, connecting him with the charges against the two unnamed congressmen in the grand jury report at Chicago. He demanded an investigation by the house.

He was interrupted by applause repeatedly and when he finished the whole membership of the house rose and cheered for several minutes, after which Representative Upshaw, of Georgia, a democrat, spoke and affirmed his faith in Langley and Representative Zihlman, of Maryland, who has also been mentioned.

MAN ADMITS GUILTY
WHEN HE FACES
ALL WOMAN JURY

Pottsville, Pa., March 7.—Hell hath no fury like an all-woman jury sitting on a prohibition case, probably thought John M. Harner.

John had pleaded not guilty on a charge of selling liquor "to persons of known tendencies toward intoxication," and sat confidently in court as they began to draw the jury.

As one woman after another was accepted, he grew more nervous. Finally the last woman juror was selected and Harner leaped to his feet. "I change my plea to guilty," he said in disgusted accents.

He was let off with a $300 fine.

COOLIDGE NOTES
TO EXPLAIN WIRES
TANGLE POLITICS

McLean's Influence at White House Too Apparent To Offset Explanations.

BY RAYMOND CLAPPER.

Washington, March 7.—Some uneasiness has developed among republican leaders as a result of explanations regarding the connection between the white house and E. B. McLean, publisher of the Washington Post, and a leading figure in the oil scandal.

For the first time since the scandal broke, there have been developments which bring Coolidge directly into the picture. They have not connected the president with the oil lease affair, but they have disclosed an association with McLean which continued after the latter admitted having misled the senate oil committee with a false story about having loaned Albert B. Fall $100,000.

Republicans are hoping that the series of explanations now being made will clear up any lingering doubts in the public mind. Coolidge is placed in a situation somewhat like that of William G. McAdoo. Neither is connected with the oil lease affair directly, but both have been shown to have had relations with prominent figures in the scandal.

Is Parallel Case. McAdoo admittedly has suffered a political blow which may prevent his nomination. How seriously Coolidge will be affected will depend upon further revelations to come next week.

Democrats insist that if McAdoo's connection with Doherty was sufficient to react against him politically, Coolidge's relations with McLean will have a similarly adverse effect upon the president. There is visible uneasiness among republicans which lends support to this view. When the democrats were assailing Coolidge in the senate for his relations with McLean, there was a significant reluctance on the part of republican senators to come to the president's defense. Lodge was the only one who rose to protect Coolidge and he had just come from the white house where he obtained a statement of explanation which he presented to the senate.

Footprints in Trail. Here, briefly, are some of the links which show the straight of McLean's influence around the white house:

OFFICERS' FEES

The County Board Chairman Says He Will Fight Acceptance of Money.

With the declaration that he had secured legal advice on the point, and that he is assured the proposition of splitting legal fees with the county is immoral and illegal, Edwin F. Johnson, chairman of the county commission addressing a conference of Roy Dorsey's friends Friday afternoon, said that for his part he will accept no money from any public officer in behalf of the county if any ever is tendered to him.

The conference was held in Dorsey headquarters, room 223 Atlanta Trust building, and overflowed the two rooms of headquarters and filled the corridor.

Mr. Johnson commended the incumbent record as solicitor.

"I am speaking not only as the friend of Roy Dorsey," Mr. Johnson said, "I am working for the good of Fulton county rather than that of any Defendant in $100,000 Damage Suit Denies Charge That He Made Attack on the Plaintiff.

SAYS HE GAVE CHECK TO PREVENT SCENE

Claims Byfield Told Him, "If You Don't Make That Check Good, I'll Blow Your Brains Out."

Washington, D. C., March 7.—That certain oil interests through the late Jake Hamon, republican national committeeman, of Oklahoma, offered votes of delegates to General Leonard Wood when the latter was deadlocked in the lead of the republican convention at Chicago in 1920, if Wood would agree to appoint Hamon secretary of the interior, is the sensational allegation of Leonard Wood, Jr. The latter's signed statement is released exclusively today by the North American Newspaper Alliance. His father's rejection of his offer, young Wood claims, lost General Wood the nomination.

Clara Smith Hamon Declares Story "Undoubtedly True," While General Refuses to Comment

Walter T. Candler did not attempt to attack Mrs. Clyde Byfield, but was the victim of a deliberate plot by Byfield to extort money from him—according to the local capitalist's testimony Friday afternoon in trial of Mrs. Byfield's $100,000 damage suit against him for an alleged assault on her aboard the steamship Berengaria, bound for France, in the summer of 1922.

Mr. Candler was the last important witness to be called to the stand by the defense, and after several depositions regarding Byfield's activities abroad the ship, and regarding Mrs. Byfield's physical condition after her return to Atlanta in August, 1922, the defense announced its case closed. The arguments will begin Saturday morning before Judge John B. Hutchison, in DeKalb superior court, and the case probably will go to the jury late Saturday afternoon.

"Dramatic Entrance." In his testimony Friday afternoon, Candler stated that he had just entered the Byfield stateroom on the evening night before landing at Cherbourg, and seeing Mrs. Byfield on the bed, had asked her how she was feeling, when Byfield made a dramatic entrance into the room, crying:

"Ah, ha, I've caught you at last; I've been suspecting this for six months—you've got to pay me!"

In less than three minutes, said Candler, Byfield had drawn a blank check from his pocket and ordered Candler to sign it for $25,000.

"He knows he did that," said Candler. "She knows he did it—even if she will not admit it."

He recounted for his presence in the stateroom by his claim that the Candler and Byfields, being on the European voyage as a party, granted each other, tacitly, the right to visit

Police Riot Squad Quells Factional Row of Bosses To Control State Delegates.

Kansas City, Mo., March 7.—One man was shot, another was stabbed, twenty were injured and more than two score were arrested in a free-for-all fray between 250 constituents of two factions of the local democratic organization Friday night.

The battle lasted for nearly half an hour until a fierce attack by forty policemen who answered a riot call succeeded in putting down the uprising.

For weeks feeling has run high between supporters of Mike Pendergast and his rival, Miles Bulger, "Little Caesar" of the second ward. The tension was intensified the last few days by the approach of the democratic "mob" primary scheduled to open Friday evening.

Two hundred Pendergast supporters blocked the stairway to the municipal court room and milled about on the street in front of the building when Bulger supporters, led by "Kebae," a kicking burro from the north side, arrived.

Bulger was prepared to obtain a majority of delegates to the state convention, if a fighting spirit would do it.

A few moments later a shot rang out and John Boylan, 30, a Pendergast man, fell wounded. A knife flashed and Frank Rose, 35, dropped, slashed in the face and neck. Both were taken to the general hospital where they were treated and sent home.

A riot call was sent in and the officers who responded after making 45 arrests, had the rioters under control. A squad of police then guarded the meeting which proceeded peacefully.

Proffer of G. O. P. Nomination Made at 1920 Convention on Day Before Harding Won.

Washington, D. His father's rejection of his offer, young Wood claims, lost General Wood the nomination.

Clara Smith Hamon, now Mrs. John W. Gorman, of Beverly Hills, Cal., who was charged with killing Hamon and subsequently acquitted, when asked to comment on Leonard Wood, Jr.'s statement, pronounced it undoubtedly true. Claiming that Hamon had never kept any political secrets from her and that she had offered the nomination to Wood. When quotations from the statements of his son and the former Clara Smith Hamon were laid before General Wood, now governor general of the Philippine islands, in Manila yesterday by a N. A. N. A. correspondent, the general stated that he declined to discuss, in any way, at this time incidents of the 1920 campaign or statements of Leonard Wood, Jr.

Young Wood's Statement. Leonard Wood, junior's, signed statement, made to Edgar Mels, special correspondent of the N. A. N. A. and The Constitution follows:

"I have known ever since I attended the republican convention in 1920, that certain oil interests made an offer to my father, General Leonard Wood, which he refused flatly. This offer probably would have assured him the republican nomination for president had he accepted. I am intensely proud that my father rejected a proposition, which might have forced him to turn traitor to his country, had he accepted."

"Before relating events occurring during the convention itself, I must rectify those which lead up to the proffer of the nomination. I had been in France, having gone there from the New York World, on which I worked as reporter. During my absence, in the early fall of 1919, I am told, Jake Hamon, the Oklahoma oil man, some-

To All Rogers' Store Managers

Realizing that Saturday is a very busy day with those upon whose shoulders rests largely the responsibility of serving our many customers and of disposing for a fair profit the excellent and almost innumerable products of purest foods offered in our nearly 200 stores, we are not going to intrude upon your valuable time or generous patience this morning, but shall write as briefly as possible.

We say this is a dignified advertisement—for the reason that in the fulfillment of our duties as advertising director we have many minds to please and many styles and types of patrons to appeal to. If humanly possible we want to satisfy and please them all—a very difficult undertaking, but one that never hurts anyone to attempt.

As the writer of a few plain, everyday bulletins issued to you managers through the press, we have been gratified to receive a number of congratulations from patrons and friends for having broken away from the conventional. The selling of pure food products—and the very best of products, too, as found in our stores—is just plain, common sense, human kind of work. Courtesy, kindness, honesty, plus a reasonable degree of intelligence, are chief requisites. One selling groceries cannot be dignified to a noticeable degree if such a one hopes to be congenial and happy and agreeable with his trade. Therefore, I have tried to be just as human-like and just as natural and easy as I can in my talks to you gentlemen as I could be—just as I wanted and believed you gentlemen to be in your stores. I have even referred to you many times as "fellows"—for you are all good fellows—but I have shocked the dignity of one of our customers by so doing.

The mail brought our company a few days ago a very sad lament that so dignified a company should allow the use of so undignified an expression—and then there were other complaints along this line, although the writer admitted he read our advertisements—an admission which quite surprised me.

But the sad part of all this criticism is the man of dignity failed to sign his name. Poor anonymous writer. Someone without a name. But in pity for his feelings, and in an effort to write an advertisement to suit his aesthetic taste, I am trying to put all the dignity possible in this bulletin to you gentlemen.

We wonder if this writer, with all his boasted dignity, loses some of it at his home, and before the bosom of his fireside eats Rogers' fine, fancy sifted peas with his knife. We hope not.

In the meantime, gentlemen, do not forget—I came pretty near saying "don't forget"—that the big label contest is now on in full blast. Many splendid organizations have entered and are at work gathering and saving labels and cartons. So keep talking it to your trade. It takes constant advertising to keep things before the public. You must keep telling them. Remember, a man cannot kiss his wife on the first day of the year and expect that to be a reminder of his love and affection for all the days of that year. It is constancy—repetition—that impresses and makes and holds attention for all time. So keep advertising this big label contest—for us and for practically every other groceryman in Atlanta.

Now, fellows—I mean gentlemen—do not overlook the special values offered for today. They are shown on the left side of this advertisement.

And I wonder if it would be undignified if I should say—

To Manager Cruselle,

465 Grant Street: Knowing that there is no better coffee on the market than Golden Glow, we want you to give, with Rogers' compliments, a pound of this excellent coffee to Mrs. J. W. Hardy, 392 Atlanta Avenue, if she should visit your store today or Monday. She may be a regular user of this coffee, as are thousands of other good housewives in Atlanta, but we want to make SURE that she is, and believe that a trial will convince her.

To Manager Story, 1042

West College Avenue: As the warm days approach we think of the fine Ridgeway's Teas sold in our stores. If Mrs. Joseph Cravens, of Oakhurst, visits your store today or Monday, please see that she is given, with Rogers' compliments, a one-half pound tin of Ridgeway's Orange Label Tea. We know that she will enjoy it.

Falling Engine Endangers Live At New Biltmore

A score of lives were endangered and considerable damage was done Friday morning when the crane which was used to hoist a 3,000-pound Westinghouse motor to the roof of the new Biltmore hotel, now under construction on West Peachtree street, broke, plunging the heavy machine down 100 feet to the roof of an inside concrete court.

In falling, the huge dynamo had chipped the cornice work and broken and cracked the six-inch reinforced concrete roof of the court. The solid concrete roof alone saved the engine from continuing its fall to the ground, several stories beneath, and as it was, the engine plunged part way through the roof.

Twenty of the engines are used on the roof of the hotel for operating pumps and fans, and several had been hoisted by the crane previous to the accident. The Farrell Heating and Plumbing company, constructing the roof, Saturday morning will start work of repairing the damage done and the accident will not materially set back the work.

DRY AGENTS HIT FOR BUYING BOOZE FOR "EVIDENCE"

Washington, March 7.—A provision aimed at the purchase of "evidence" by prohibition agents was inserted in the treasury appropriation bill to just before its passage by the senate. It was offered by Senator Brand, democrat, Louisiana, and declares that no funds shall be used in "committing a violation of the prohibition laws," or for securing their violation.

PAID-UP POLICIES FOR EX-SOLDIERS

Washington, March 7.—A new form of soldier bonus with paid-up life insurance as a principal provision was decided upon today by the House Ways and Means committee. A proposal to include an option of full cash payments is under consideration.

Adoption of the insurance scheme definitely sidetracks the bill passed last session providing four options—cash payments to those entitled to less than $50; adjusted service certificates, a form of deferred payments; navy vocational training and farm or home aid. Proponents of the new bill argue it has a much better chance of presidential approval. The old measure was vetoed by President Harding while President Coolidge has also declared against a soldier's bonus. Considerable support was given today to the motion of Representative Oldfield, democrat, Arkansas, to make full cash payments an alternate option of the measure.

Presents Endowment Plan. A plan advanced by Representative Bacharach, republican, New Jersey, will be used by a subcommittee in working out the definite form of the insurance provision. It provides for 30-year endowment policies to all veterans who served more than 90 days. By a vote of the full committee the rank of captain in the army, and marine corps and lieutenant in the navy would be included in the benefits of the measure. This provision is the same as in the old bill. Mr. Bacharach's plan would allow policies with values figured on $2.65 for each day of service. This would cost not more than $2,000,000,000, he said, with a maximum of $78,000,000 for any one of the 30 years.

Final Action Next Week. Mr. Bacharach said he would also favor placing the administration of the schemes in the hands of old line insurance firms. Some favor has been expressed toward giving it to the war risk bureau. Adoption of the former plan, Mr. Bacharach argued, would relieve the government of further administrative costs.

Upon appointment of a subcommittee hearings are planned at which insurance experts will be called. The final draft of the bill then will be written. Representatives Fish, New York, and Andrews, Massachusetts, republicans, also have proposed insurance policy plans similar to that of Mr. Bacharach. Mr. Fish proposed a 20-year endowment plan with policies valued at $400 for each six months of service and $1,000 as a maximum.

Final action on the measure by the committee is not expected before the middle of next week.

Publicity's Glare Is Much too Much For "Hi Johnston"

Lansing, Mich., March 7.—"Zilwaukee Hiram" Johnston, erstwhile candidate for the republican presidential nomination at the Michigan primaries April 7 next, has found publicity too much for his retiring disposition. First listed as a Saginaw county "dirt farmer," then mentioned as a candidate for the Michigan statehood, Johnston is now down on the records as "missing."

John Baird, state conservation commissioner, who sponsored the candidacy of Johnston, filed petitions that resulted in his certification as a candidate and then presented to the secretary of state, a letter signed "Hiram Johnston," asking withdrawal of the name from the ballot, blames the publicity glare of publicity for the latest obstacle in the search for his candidate in the flesh. Baird had invited correspondents to accompany him tomorrow morning into the wilderness of Zilwaukee township and promised to lead them to "Hiram's home," an interlopers' correspondent desired not to wait, and tramped through the swamp lands yesterday to the Johnston shack.

The correspondent returned here and showed no surprise. Hiram, he said, had yearned to bask in publicity, even to aspiring to the highest office in the power of the electorate. However, when some one resurrected a section of the election law that mentioned a $1,000 fine and a jail term for tampering with the statute, Johnston, in Baird's words, "felt it high time to shake the mud of the Saginaw valley from his high-top boots."

William Baird, son of the commissioner, said today that Johnston had told him of his discovery. Baird showed no surprise. Hiram, he said, had yearned to bask in publicity, even to aspiring to the highest office in the power of the electorate. However, when some one resurrected a section of the election law that mentioned a $1,000 fine and a jail term for tampering with the statute, Johnston, in Baird's words, "felt it high time to shake the mud of the Saginaw valley from his high-top boots."

Mr. Crisp recalled that in the sixty-third congress, when the house was democratic, an elections committee controlled by the democrats unanimously decided to retain in his seat the late Representative John M. C. Smith, republican, Michigan, whose election had been contested on virtually the same grounds on which Chandler is endeavoring to unseat Bloom.

Mr. Chandler, his opponent at the polls, is seated in his place. Three democrats on the committee dissented.

ATTORNEYS GENERAL TO DISCUSS GAS FIGHT

Chicago has been selected as the place for a conference between attorneys general of the different states on the price of gasoline. The meeting is set for March 14, according to a letter received Friday by Attorney General George M. Napier from O. S. Spillman, attorney general of Nebraska, chairman of the committee of attorneys general to devise a plan to control gasoline prices. Mr. Napier is secretary.

Mr. Napier will introduce a plan to place gasoline under control of the state public service commissions, as regards intrastate commerce, and under the interstate commerce commission or the federal trade commission on interstate traffic. Recent increases in the retail price of gasoline are looked upon by the attorneys general as unwarranted by freight rates, conditions of distribution or any other tangible factor. They believe that the motive behind most of these variations in the price is the effort to defeat independent oil companies through the weapons of price warfare, Napier said.

It is probable that an effort to put a bill through congress putting some sort of restrictions on gasoline will result from the Chicago meeting.

CRISP MAKES PLEA TO SEAT SOL BLOOM

Washington, March 7.—In a formal statement, Representative Crisp, democrat, Georgia, former parliamentarian of the house, today appealed to his colleagues not to unseat Sol Bloom as a member from the nineteenth New York district.

An elections committee which investigated charges of irregularity in connection with the election of Bloom, who is a democrat, has recommended that former Representative Walter M. Chandler, republican, his opponent at the polls, be seated in his place. Three democrats on the committee dissented.

Bitter Contest Forecast For Mantle of Mohammed

London, March 7.—(By the Associated Press.)—The designation of King Hussein of the Hedjaz as caliph by the Arabs of his kingdom as well as the Moslems in Mesopotamia and Transjordan which are ruled by his two sons, is regarded in London as the forerunner of a bitter contest among the Islamic countries for the mantle of the prophet Mohammed.

A split of the entire oriental world and an unbridgeable chasm in the Moslem church are predicted. The first signs of this, British observers believe, are to be found in the order of the Angora government warning Turks intending to make a pilgrimage to Mecca and Medina, which are part of Hussein's dominions, that they may be in great danger there.

Since the unceremonious expulsion of the prince Abdul Medjid from Constantinople as "the shadow of Allah upon earth" India, Egypt, Afghanistan, Morocco and other oriental countries have advanced claims to spiritual primacy in the Mohammedan world and it is thought possible here that the spectacle may be witnessed of two rival caliphs, just as there were two contending popes centuries ago.

Meetings of the Islamic associations are being hurriedly summoned throughout India, says the Calcutta correspondent of The Daily Telegraph, to consider the action of the Turkish government in abolishing the caliphate at Constantinople.

Those bodies which have met have made indignant protest at what they consider an outrage of their faith. Islam, they say, is faced with a serious crisis which can only be solved by a plebiscite of the entire Moslem world.

The correspondent quotes the Bengali minister Ghuznavi as saying that Turkey has wounded Moslem sentiment and violated Moslem tradition and consequently forfeited the sympathy of the Mohammedans throughout the world. Ghuznavi looks to King Hussein of the Hedjaz to maintain the institution and dignity of the caliphate.

ECHOLS VAT CASES IN JURY'S HAND

The fate of 21 Echols county cattlemen charged with conspiracy to prevent the operation of government cattle dipping laws is in the hands of the jury; having been turned over to the body at the conclusion of Judge Barrett's charge about 5 o'clock this afternoon. A verdict had not been reached at a late hour tonight.

Little evidence was introduced today in the conspiracy cases, as attorneys for the defense resting the case 15 minutes after court convenes. District Attorney Boatright opened the argument for the government and spoke for half an hour on law and evidence in the case.

the witness but not the facts. During Attorney Boatright's speech Max Lochridge, mother of Max Lochridge the slain inspector, became hysterical and was escorted from the room. Attorney Lee Branch, for the defense, followed and went into a discussion of state's rights and the relation of state to the federal government.

He contended that if there were violations of law in not dipping cats

It was an offense against the state and not the federal government, that the government had no right to try a man for an offense within the state and against the state unless such acts interrupt interstate commerce.

Colonel John W. Bennett, former district attorney, followed for the defense and spoke for two hours. During his argument he attempted to show that the alleged offenses were committed before federal officers were se-into the county. Assistant District Attorney Charles Redding closed the defense. He reviewed the evidence and defended government testimony.

The second address was before the Civitan club, in which Dr. Brittain told of the work done in establishing the school of ceramics at Georgia Tech.

The Macon Civitan club has adopted as its major work the bringing of the mineral resources of Georgia before the people of the state.

TARIFF ON WHEAT HIKED 12 CENTS

Washington, March 7.—An increase of 12 cents a bushel in the tariff rate on wheat was ordered today by President Coolidge.

Acting under the flexible provisions of the tariff act and on the basis of the tariff commission's recent inquiry, the president at the same time ordered an increase of 20 cents a hundred pounds in the duty on wheat flour and a decrease of 50 per cent in the ad valorem rate on mill feeds.

The new rates are ordered by the president and set forth in a formal proclamation which will become effective in 30 days.

Will Hit Canadian Run.

The increase will become effective in time to be applied to the flood of Canadian wheat which depends on the United States about the middle of April each year with the opening of navigation on the Great Lakes.

The advance in rates was sought to aid particularly the hard wheat growers of the northwest but the result is an increase in the price of spring wheat is expected to be reflected in the market quotations on winter wheat raised in the middle western and other states.

The proclamation setting forth the new rates was accompanied by a white house statement saying that on the basis of the record of the tariff commission's investigation the president had found:

"That the principal competing country in the case of wheat, wheat flour and mill feeds is the Dominion of Canada.

"That in the case of wheat the difference in costs of production between the United States and the Dominion of Canada is 42 cents per bushel of 60 pounds.

"That in the case of flour, the difference in costs of production between the United States and the Dominion of Canada is $1.04 per 100 pounds.

This consists of two elements, the one an amount deemed to compensate the millers for the duty on wheat which they must pay on wheat imported into the United States and he other to cover the difference in conversion costs in the two countries.

"The difference in costs of production of mill feeds between the United States and the Dominion of Canada is 50 cents per hundred pounds.

The increase in the rate on flour also applies to semolina, crushed or rolled wheat and similar wheat products. The mill feeds classification includes bran, shorts and other by-product feeds obtained in the milling of wheat.

First Change in Duty.

The new rates represent the first change in the duties of the Tariff-McCumber tariff act since it was passed by congress in September, 1922, and the proclamation issued today was the first exercise of the powers conferred on the president to increase or decrease rates within a maximum of 50 per cent after investigation by the tariff commission.

Several other inquiries designed to ascertain whether existing rates are fair are under way, including an investigation of the duty on sugar.

The first step toward a change in the wheat tariff was taken last November by the Wheat Council of the United States, Inc., of which Representative Anderson, of Minnesota, is president. The wheat council filed an application for investigation on the grounds that the present rate of 10 cents a bushel on wheat did not adequately represent the difference in Canadian and American costs of production.

Field reports and records were obtained from seventy-nine regions in the United States and Canada and were supplemented by testimony before the commission late in February.

The 12-cent-a-bushel increase in the wheat duty which the president ordered, was not as great as had been expected in some quarters as it had been believed that the maximum advance of 15 cents allowed under the law would be proclaimed. Some of those who had been following the commission's inquiry expected a proportional increase in the mill feeds rate, but the president, in view of the commission's findings ordered the maximum reduction.

The mill feeds reduction is expected to work to the benefit of the wheat growers and other farmers as it probably will result in slight decrease in the price of the products which are used throughout the agricultural regions in feeding the stock.

EXTORTION PLOT LAID TO BYFIELD

each other's rooms on all occasions. "There was nothing, absolutely nothing wrong with my being there," said Candler. "In fact, Byfield had told me on an upper deck only three or four minutes before that he was bound for the stateroom and when I opened the door I thought that he would either be there then, or in a very few minutes."

Tried to Prevent Scene.
Candler declared he tried to temporize with Byfield about the check, but that Byfield was so boisterous and incessant in his demands that he finally acceded, for the sake of stopping the noise and saving embarrassment to himself and his two little girls, who were traveling with him.

Candler also recounted Byfield's alleged threats while the party was in Paris, declaring that Byfield said, "If you don't make that check good right away, I'll blow your brains out," and that later Byfield threatened exposure by wide publicity.

Ex-Governor Slaton, for the plaintiff, introduced as evidence part of the suit filed against Byfield by Candler, enjoining payment on a note given Byfield by the banker, in an attempt to prove that the testimony of Candler in the present case was the former suit did not "jibe."

Slaton's point was that Candler, in his first suit, was intimating he was intoxicated the night of the incident. Mr. Arnold, for the defense, insisted that the entire suit, not part of it, be entered as evidence, since, said Mr. Arnold, the testimony in both suits was identical. Candler accused some little argument between the attorneys, but the entire document was finally admitted.

Afternoon Session.
Court was called to order for the afternoon session at 1:30 o'clock and after Judge Hutcheson had disposed of two brief civil cases, the main case was resumed. Mr. Arnold calling Dr. E. J. Daniel, of Kirkwood, to the stand, continuing the line of medical testimony, regarding obstetrics, which has featured the case in an effort to determine Mrs. Byfield's physical condition after the episode off the French coast.

This line of testimony, both through direct examination by Mr. Arnold and cross-examination by ex-Governor Slaton, continued until late in the afternoon.

Mr. Candler, the defendant, was called to the stand, and sworn as a witness.

Mr. Arnold began the direct examination of the local hotel but Mr. Candler didn't recall exactly when he first met Mr. Byfield, but he said he met him as a customer of the Central Bank and Trust corporation, either late in 1921 or early in 1922.

"Do you recall how much he owed your bank when this trip was made in 1922?"

"About $10,000 or $12,000."

Candler Planned Trip.
Mr. Candler said that he conceived the plan of the European trip and on account of the two Candler children he believed some lady should go along. He first asked Mr. and Mrs. Jonas Ewing to go, but when it was found the Ewings could not go, he asked the Byfields, said Mr. Candler.

Byfield, according to the testimony, later went to Candler and told him that, since thinking it over, he would make the trip if he (Candler) would lend him the money for passage.

"I agreed to do this," said Candler, "and he said he would pay me this back if he had to make his grocery bill wait."

The amount in question was between $2,000 and $2,500, said Candler.

He said that Byfield made the suggestion to New York that he (Byfield) go to Detroit to see about the new automobile agency and let Mrs. Byfield, the Candler children, and Candler go on to Europe.

"I said, 'Well, go ahead,' but didn't even take it seriously," continued the witness, "and that's all there was to that Detroit matter."

The witness declared that he had advised Byfield against buying and taking out the residence of Candler in Detroit Hills.

Candler Meets Bernstein.
Byfield introduced him to Bernstein, Drexler and Lyons on the ship early in the voyage to France, the testimony, Candler described these poker companions. He described the poker game—one only, he said—in which he participated on the ship.

"The sky was the limit," Candler said. "I bought $20 worth of chips; won for a while, then came back down to my original $20 and ended in my chips."

There was other brief testimony regarding Byfield and the three strangers.

The testimony came to the night before landing and the party given by Schendels in a private room on the Beregnaria. All drank some champagne, he said, and after the children had retired and dinner was over, they retired to what the witness described as the "palm room" on the deck above the private dining room where the dinner had been served.

"Did the Byfields ever come into your room without knocking?"

"Why, yes, sir; and we thought nothing of it. I used to go to their room, and they would come in and be absolutely all right at any time we found the doors unlocked—it was absolutely all right."

Informality Ruled.
He described the informality existing among the passengers. "One big family," he said.

A man named Silver played the piano, he said.

Questioned as to the amount of liquor consumed, Candler said: "Mrs. Byfield drank more than was good for her."

"How do you know?"

"Well, I attempted to dance with her and she couldn't dance. I took her over and got her to sit down on a settee—and I left her."

He said a little later he saw Byfield and his wife in the "palm room" and that this was very late.

Witness told of Byfield's return and that Byfield said, "Well, it's time we were all going to bed."

Candler said he went down to his own room, got a glass of water, crossed the corridor and went over to the Byfield's room to "see how they were and he stayed."

"I had every reason to believe they were both in there, and I opened the door and stood in it. I never closed the door."

Asked How She Felt.
He saw Mrs. Byfield in the bed, he said, and asked her how she felt.

He described a dramatic entrance just then of Byfield into the room.

"Ah, ha, I've caught you at last. I've been suspecting that for six months—you've got to pay me," witness quoted Byfield as saying.

"He struck at me; I fell over a chair and he started beating his wife most unmercifully. I tried to pull him off, he struck at me again and I hit him as hard as I could in the nose."

Byfield was loud and boisterous in his charges that Candler had been intimate with his wife and began to demand $25,000 when he came into the room," said Candler.

"I gave him that check just to shut him up," said Candler.

Drew Out Blank Check.
Byfield reached into his pocket and drew out a blank check, he knew it and she knows it," he declared the witness.

Candler said that "upon reflection," he saw now that Byfield "had thrown his wife into my way after time before this."

Byfield kept "taking on," said Candler, to efforts to pacify him being of any avail.

He described the scene in the writing room when he (Candler) wrote the check.

"I tried to temporize with him—plead with him; told him he was accusing me falsely."

"He fairly yelled, 'Write that check! Write that check!' So I wrote him just a check for $25,000."

Byfield went to a ship's officer and told him, "Here's a check for $25,000 this man (Candler) gave me," according to the story.

Candler said that he saw Mrs. Byfield next morning and that he sympathized with her and told her he would "see her through" on the trip if she would not.

The trip to Paris from Cherbourg, after landing, was traced by Mr. Arnold's questions and Candler's replies.

Both he and the Byfields stopped at the Carleton, in the French capital.

Came to His Room.
"Byfield," said the witness, "came to my room one afternoon and said, 'I'm tired of fooling with you, and if you don't pay me that money, I'll blow your brains out.'"

"He also said that if I didn't get him the money by the next day he would write the whole business to the newspapers."

Witness described a meeting between Byfield, the three steamship acquaintances and himself, at which an effort at an amicable settlement was made.

The letter of exoneration, which Byfield signed, was brought out at this gathering, he said, and also the note Byfield's wife had written to him after returning to Atlanta that after returning to Atlanta he filed suit against Byfield to prevent collection on the note he held.

Mr. Slaton took the witness to the copy of suit against Byfield by Candler, in which something was said with reference to Candler's intoxication on the night of the Beregnaria incident, was brought forth by plaintiff's attorney in evident rebuttal to Candler's statement that he was sober on that eventful evening aboard the ship.

Tries to Show Discrepancy.
Mr. Slaton was attempting to prove that Mr. Candler's suit for injunction and his statement on the stand regarding the happenings of the night did not "jibe."

Mr. Slaton wanted to know if the witness had told any of the ship's officers that he was not guilty of the charges Byfield had so loudly made against him on that night.

Mr. Arnold read the portion referred to, objecting to a "wrong interpretation" being put on it by Mr. Slaton.

Through evident error, Mr. Slaton, in addressing a question to the witness, said:

"Be your pardon, Governor Slaton," interrupted Mr. Candler.

"I beg Mr. Byfield's pardon," said the ex-governor.

Mr. Arnold jumped to his feet and objected to the "attitude" of plaintiff's counsel and Judge Hutcheson cautioned counsel for both sides to "stick to the facts in the case."

Mr. Slaton quizzed the witness as to his motives in going to Mrs. Byfield's stateroom and he replied it was for the purpose of finding out how his friends were feeling.

Ends Testimony.
After brief rebuttal testimony, in reply to Mr. Arnold's questions, relative to a show he had attended in Paris, the witness came down, after having been on the stand one hour and forty minutes.

Dr. L. C. Fischer's deposition, given, the document said, under compulsion, was next read—concerning the physical condition of Mrs. Byfield during her stay in the Davis-Fischer sanitarium, in August, 1922, the full import of which was that Mrs. Byfield was normal.

Byfield's letter of exoneration to Candler, saying it was written of his own free will and accord, and giving complete vindication for the extent on the Beregnaria, was read to the jury and placed in evidence.

Notes given Byfield by Candler and deck plans of the Beregnaria were introduced.

The defense closed its case at 4:45 o'clock, and the plaintiff offered some documentary evidence.

Defense Taker Stand.
First witnesses for the defense took the stand at the opening of court Friday morning, 26 citizens testifying during the morning to Candler's good character. Depositions of several attorneys on the Beregnaria who were attracted or called following the extent on the Beregnaria, were read, corroborating testimony to the effect that Byfield struck his wife several times, and that he was later given a check for $25,000 by Candler.

George M. Napier, attorney general of Georgia, was the first to testify. He stated that he had known Walter Candler for 15 years, and declared his reputation to be good, saying that the case being tried is the first reflection on the defendant's character that he had ever heard.

26 Character Witnesses.
Other witnesses who declared that they had known Candler for many years, and all of whom testified that he is a man of good character, were Dr. Plato Durham, dean of the Theological school of Emory university; Norman Miller, well known school book dealer and manufacturer and a former director of the Central Bank and Trust corporation; W. Hayne Gibson, former potentate of Yaarab shrine and a schoolmate of Candler; Dr. W. E. Melton, professor of English at Emory; Dr. H. W. Cox, president of that university; Leon O'Neal, Decatur insurance broker; B. F. Burgess, clerk of the DeKalb superior court; J. A. McCurdy, sheriff of DeKalb county; Dr. Henry B. Myers, well known Methodist clergyman; C. H. Talley, tax collector of DeKalb county; Aaron Young, Decatur real estate dealer; Dr. John Haddock, principal of the DeKalb county schools; Dr. S. A. Goodyear, professor of modern languages at Emory; John R. Scott, of Decatur; R. J. Zuber, tax assessor of DeKalb county; J. L. Daniel, Decatur clothing merchant; J. E. McCurdy, of Stone Mountain; H. H. Ewing, prominent realtor; Hugh M. Willett, Atlanta insurance man; A. J. Woodruff, DeKalb county representative in the legislature; L. F. Y. Nash, DeKalb county official; J. M. Holcomb, superintendent of the Decatur Orphan's home; Lloyd Park, long dealer; Thomas B. Paine, capitalist; and Dudley Renne, insurance agent.

J. H. Ewing was recalled to the stand, and related that he once saw Mrs. Byfield at the home of a friend, and that he was then in residence at a time when the proposed European trip was being discussed, and that Mrs. Ewing advised postponing the trip until Candler's children were a little older.

Boat Employees Testify.
Edgar Dunlap, Atlanta insurance man, said that he had returned to the United States on the Aquitania in July, 1922, and that both Mr. and Mrs. Byfield were on board. He said that Mrs. Byfield wore dark glasses, and he did not notice whether or not she was bruised.

He said that a large part of Byfield's time on the return journey was spent playing cards, and that Bernstein, mentioned in the testimony of both Mr. and Mrs. Byfield Thursday, was also playing.

The first deposition read was that of Robert L. Willard, of Southampton, England, a ship inspector. He stated that he was on his usual round of inspection on the morning of July 17, 1922, and after being informed of the disturbance, watched Candler and Byfield, fearing further trouble. He said that Byfield exhibited a $25,000 check on the Central Bank and Trust corporation, of Atlanta, which he (Byfield) said "Mr. Candler had given him in exchange for wrecking his life and attacking his wife."

Continuing, he said that Byfield kissed the back of his stateroom, saying that he wanted to get his clothes, but that when he was refused admittance, Candler gave him an overcoat. The deposition also showed further conversation between Candler and Byfield in which the former admitted giving the check, and telling what it was for.

Says Byfield Asked for Gun.
Berrie Richard Bartley, night watchman on the ship, also signed a deposition which was read during the morning. He told of seeing Byfield enter his cabin on the night of the alleged attack, and after an exclamation, closed the door. When he knocked at the door during the ensuing quarrel, he stated that it was opened by Byfield, who cried, "This man is insulting my wife!"

He said that Byfield later asked him for a gun. "Candler," he stated, was fully dressed, while Byfield, "as in his shirt sleeves. He told of later coming on the two men in the ship's library, and that Byfield asked him to be a witness to a check given him by Candler. He repeated Williams' testimony in regard to Candler's giving Byfield an overcoat after he had been refused admittance to his stateroom.

Stewards' Deposition Read.
The deposition of Mrs. Florence Critchley, a stewardess on the Beregnaria, was the next to be introduced. She told of being called to the Byfield cabin on two occasions, but said that the door was locked, and that ship's carpenters then opened the door to enable Byfield to get his clothes.

She said that Mrs. Byfield's face was badly bruised, and that Byfield tried to comfort her while the stewardess was packing his clothing.

On cross examination, Mrs. Critchley stated that she had observed Mrs. Byfield enter Candler's stateroom on several occasions, but that it was only when the children were there.

LANGLEY DEMANDS PROBE OF CHARGE

Washington, March 7.—Representative Langley, republican, Kentucky, on the floor of the house, demanded an investigation of published charges that he had received money for exerting official influence.

In a five-minute speech, Mr. Langley emphatically denied that he had been guilty of any wrong-doing. He was cheered by the house when he concluded his appeal for "a square deal."

Mr. Langley, who is chairman of the public buildings and grounds committee, declared he had no information that he was implicated in evidence revealed before the Chicago grand jury other than accounts containing his name published in newspapers.

Shocked by Accusation.
For several days Mr. Langley said he had heard whispered rumors that his name had been brought into the grand jury's investigation. His first inclination, he said, was to deny such reports, but he had decided not to do so because there had been no specific charge preferred.

"I assumed," he said, "when the house yesterday adopted a resolution calling on the department of justice for names of the men involved that they would be disclosed by this time. That information has not been received. When a reputable morning paper, however, has contained in substance the statement that I am one of the men accused, it is time for me to act. I can't remain silent."

Mr. Langley declared he had served the government for more than thirty years and that never before had any accusation been cast on his personal or official integrity.

"I came from a Kentucky mountain district where people value honor more than human life," he continued. "Naturally, if I was accused at the department of justice contains my name, I ask that a quorum be immediately created where I will have the right to stand face to face with my accusers."

Langley Attacks Charges.
The department of justice should have withheld all publicity bearing on the case, Mr. Langley said, until it was "ready to deliver the goods," in backing up charges.

As the Kentucky representative made his way to the "well" of the house to make his defense, he was loudly applauded by his colleagues, who several times interrupted him to express approval of his statements.

Representative Zihlman, republican, Maryland, who earlier in the day had admitted he had heard reports that he was one of the men referred to in the Chicago grand jury's report, was not on the floor when Mr. Langley spoke.

Attempt To Enter
Dead Man in Case

Chicago, March 7.—Charging that a deliberate attempt was being made by the Coolidge managers to prevent a free expression of the sentiment in the primary states, Senator Hiram Johnson, of California, declared today he would continue to expose the tricks of the campaign wherever they are found.

In a statement issued here today Senator Johnson referred to the "humorous attempt" of the Coolidge managers in Michigan to enter a dead man in the state presidential primary to confuse the voters, and said he had encountered "just such little jokes" in four primary states.

He explained that a personal investigation of the attempt to enter Hiram Johnston as a presidential candidate in Michigan had resulted in an explanation from the press that the filing was "just a bit of humor."

The storm of indignation which swept the state as a result of the attempt to confuse the voters and thus to defeat the purpose of the primary overwhelmed the perpetrators and caused them to withdraw the fictitious candidate, for the Hiram Johnston entered, had been dead more than a year.

"Similar demonstrations of the jovial temperament of the Coolidge managers were found in the Dakotas and Alabama. In South Dakota it took two decisions of the state supreme court to get my name on the primary ballot. In North Dakota attorneys in my employ still are fighting to have the name of Senator La Follette removed from the ballot. Senator La Follette has emphatically stated that he is not a candidate in North Dakota and yet there is an issue as to whether his name shall go on the ballot. It is clearly and deliberately an attempt to frustrate the expression of the electorate."

"In Alabama we find that despite the fact that a primary law is on the statute books the republican committee has ruled that the delegates to the national convention will be selected by the committee."

Alleged Skipper
Of Rum Runner

New York, March 7.—Sir Broderick Cecil Hartwell, baronet, internationally advertised rum seller, is believed by federal officials to be aboard the liquor running steam yacht Istar, personally supervising the peddling of a shipment of Scotch whisky.

The Istar, a veteran in the rum-running fleet, is one of 28 boats at anchor off the Long Island and New Jersey coasts outside the 12-mile limit.

The authorities estimate there are 224,000 cases of assorted liquors aboard with a potential value of $11,000,000.

In circulars recently distributed on both sides of the Atlantic the baronet offered stock in his liquor-selling enterprise, advertising a 20 per cent profit every 60 days. Dispatches from London shortly after the first of the year said he had announced he soon would ship his fourth cargo to the Jersey-Long Island rum row.

"I have arranged with an American syndicate," his circulars said, "to take from me at least 10,000 cases of high-class Scotch whisky monthly. This syndicate has deposited with me bonds to the value of over $50,000 as a guarantee that the goods will be purchased and paid for in cash on arrival at a point 25 miles from shore."

M'ADOO TO MAKE TOUR OF GEORGIA

McAdoo's first Georgia address probably will be made at Marietta Friday, March 14, at a homecoming celebration to be held in his honor, according to word just received here by Miller S. Bell, manager of the McAdoo headquarters.

McAdoo will arrive here at 7:30 o'clock on the morning of March 14, and the address will be delivered at 11 o'clock. Details of a harbinger and celebration are being arranged. While it has not been definitely announced, it is probable that McAdoo will speak in Atlanta while here.

Developments Friday in the Georgia campaign of U. S. Senator Thomas W. Underwood and former Secretary of the Treasury William Gibbs McAdoo, for support of this state's delegation for the democratic nomination for the presidency, indicated an announcement that Mr. McAdoo will be in a speaking tour of the state on March 14, and a statement by former Governor Thomas W. Hardwick that he will give his support in the race to Senator Underwood.

The announcement of the coming speaking tour of the state was made in Washington, the dispatch adding that this will be the first speaking tour undertaken by McAdoo during the campaign.

ECZEMA OVER BABY'S HEAD

In Blisters. Would Cry for Hours. Cuticura Healed.

"When our baby was seven months old eczema broke out all over his head in blisters. In a few weeks it spread to his face and ears, causing much suffering and loss of sleep. His head was covered with sore eruptions and his hair fell out. He would lie and roll his head and cry for hours."

"A lady advised me to use Cuticura Soap and Ointment. I could see an improvement so purchased more, which completely healed him." (Signed) Mrs. Elizabeth Faulkner, R. D. 2, Coryton, Tenn.

Replies to Bell.

R. C. Gordon, manager of the Underwood campaign headquarters in the Kimball house, also issued a statement in reply to one made Friday by Mr. Bell.

Gordon, in his statement, brands as "treason" the charge made by Bell that the Underwood supporters are irritated by statements referring to Senator Underwood's legislative record. These statements, also, Gordon classifies as "misleading."

The statement from Gordon also charges that the subcommittee on rules of the state democratic executive committee, which met last Tuesday to draft rules for the pending primaries, was "packed for McAdoo."

He charges that in voting, five to one, against a resolution introduced by Howard H. Eilers, manager of the Underwood campaign, the subcommittee "put through a rule disfranchising the country people of the interior."

The resolution referred to would have barred all counties which did not maintain a voting booth in every precinct.

Gordon's Charges.

"Everybody knows," says Gordon, "that the professional politicians in Georgia have been trying to work up a machine in this state, through private letters, ever since June, 1923. They nearly succeeded, but have been defeated by the determined opposition of the farmers and the common people who refused to be parties to the dictation of a set of professional politicians whose sole purpose has been to control the party machinery and the party organization in the state of Georgia."

The statement concludes by a defense of Senator Underwood's legislative record and an appeal to the voters to elect a statesman and a constitutional Jeffersonian democrat.

Former Governor Hardwick, in his statement, says that he will give his support to the common people of Georgia and to the common people of the United States.

Senator James A. Reed, of Missouri, has not entered the Georgia race.

McAdoo To Speak Here.

Chicago, March 7.—William G. McAdoo will inaugurate an aggressive primary campaign against Senator Underwood in Georgia March 14.

The Georgia tour will be the first launched by the McAdoo forces.

McAdoo and Underwood are the only presidential candidates entered in the Georgia primary to be held on March 19.

ALL-STEEL PLANE TESTED IN BRITAIN

London, March 7.—An all-steel airplane, designed to be impervious to shrapnel or machine-gun bullets, has been constructed and now is being severely tested at the Royal Aircraft Station at Farnborough, Hampshire.

The new plane is said to be a formidable fighting weapon. The body is armor-plated, and the wings are of solid steel, peculiarly corrugated.

Details of the new airplane are strictly withheld. Air force officials say it is not in the least a bullet-proof aircraft, and further experiments are being carried on in laboratories and workshops.

ATLANTA PLANTS PLAN EXPOSITION FOR NEXT MONTH

An appeal to all Atlanta manufacturing plants to enter into the "Made in Atlanta" exposition to be held April 7 to 12, inclusive, at the auditorium, has been issued by P. H. Norcross, president of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce.

It is planned to display products of every factory in Atlanta in order to demonstrate to residents of this city and surrounding territory what is made in Atlanta and how it is made, the primary object being to promote the buying of made-in-Atlanta goods.

Y. W. S. Norcross will be in charge of the exposition, which is expected to be the largest of its kind ever attempted here.

Preacher Urges Congregation To "Yield Our Wills To God"

BY LOUIE D. NEWTON.

Editor Christian Index.

Stirred by the blending harmonies of worshipful hymns, the great audience of people at the tabernacle Friday night waited for the message from the preacher, who through the week has won his way to the hearts of the people of this city, state and section.

Dr. George Truett read the Lord's prayer and from one sentence of that unchained prose-poem he preached a sermon that many will remember for years to come. It was from the following words that he spoke: "Thy will be done in earth as it is done in heaven."

"The loftiest privilege of a human life is to do the will of God," began the great preacher. "Man is the only creature of God who can violate God's holy will. The flower of the field, the rivulet that leads on to the surging deep, the wind, the lightning—all these do accurately obey the will of God. But man, a moral being, is free to say yes or to say no to the purposes and will of God."

Will Face Great Test.

"If we pray this prayer, which our Lord taught us to pray, we must face the greatest test of life, namely, to be willing to give up our wills to His will, it may be. But one thing we must remember, God's will is always the best, no matter where it leads or what it costs. To do His will is to answer to the sublimest call that we can ever know. Cooperation with God will increase the super energies of our fullest growth and development. And I would have you consider that when we were taught to submit our wills to the will of God that we were invited to work with God."

"There was a great scourge sweeping over London some years ago and the people earnestly called to prayer. A Christian scientist went to the clergyman and asked if it would not be the right thing to set about finding the cause of the fearful scourge so that while they prayed they would also be active in doing their part in defeating the deadly germs. Such is the constructive work to which God calls us in co-operation."

Dr. Truett closed his sermon with a moving appeal to the people present and to all those listening in to yield their wills to the will of God. He made a powerful appeal for the religion of the Bible as he pointed to the happiness even here on earth that surely comes to everyone who will sincerely pray this prayer and give his life to God.

Morning Service.

"Christ wants Christians to believe in themselves next to their belief in Christ," declared President Edgar Young Mullins in his address before the audience at the tabernacle at 11 o'clock Friday morning. It was an address built on the idea of the spiritual sovereignty of the believer in Christ, based on a text found in John 3:7.

Dr. Mullins believes that the Christian is privileged to exert the most powerful influence of any creature in the world for the reason that Christ has indicated that what the Christian wills to do will be honored of God if it be for a righteous purpose. He quoted these words from Christ: "What ye will ye shall be doing." "What ye shall be doing" is the privilege of turning the world to God. He declared that Jesus is ever trying to put crowns of service on our heads and we are constantly taking them off and throwing them away.

FORMER PRINCE SEEKS MISSING WEDDING GIFT

Berlin, March 7.—Former Crown Prince Frederick William has taken steps to ascertain why the most elaborate wedding gift ever prepared in Germany has not been delivered, according to promises made by the prince at the time of his wedding in 1905. This is a dinner set of 1900 pieces of monogrammed silver, cut glass and finest china, designed by the best artists and costing several hundred thousand dollars.

There were many delays in its manufacture and even when the war came the set had not been completed. Now the dinner set, reposed in the vaults of the reichsbank and since Frederick William threatens suit there is much confusion among the burgomasters who contributed in the name of their respective towns as to what disposition should be made of it, as several of the towns, such as Danzig and Memel, have ceased to be German territory. All the burgomasters, however, resent any proposal that that the dinner set might go to help pay off reparations and they have called a conference for the purpose of solving the problem if possible.

REPORTERS GET REWARD FOR PART IN BANDIT HUNT

Little Rock, Ark., March 7.—The state offered a reward of $1,000 for the capture, dead or alive, of Emory Connell, Enos Sullivan and "Diamond Joe" Sullivan, notorious south-west bandits, after the three had escaped from the state penitentiary.

Connell and Enos Sullivan were killed by a posse who trapped them in the swamps near Redland. "Diamond Joe" was captured alive and is awaiting execution.

Friday three newspaper men, Allen Tilden, Joe Virges and Fred Snodgrass congratulated themselves on "drawing" the assignment. Governor McRae awarded them $220 each for the part they played in the capture.

Farm Meetings Being Held.

Forsyth, Ga., March 7.—(Special.) The Forsyth Chamber of Commerce is conducting a series of meetings in the interest of farming in different sections of the county. The first of which was held at Box Ankle Thursday night.

CONTRACT TO CLOSE UNDERPASS IS LET

Contract for closing the Forsyth street underpass was awarded by the bridges committee of council Friday to the MacDonald Construction company, whose bid for the improvement was $18,475.

Actual work cannot be begun until the completion of the Fairlie street extension, which will afford ingress and egress to the railroad yards under the Forsyth street viaduct. The Fairlie street project, well under way, will be completed within the next few weeks, it is stated.

Five construction concerns filed bids with the committee. The highest bidder was the Municipal Engineering company, who offered to close both entrances to the underpass for approximately $22,000.

In addition to the outlay called for under the MacDonald contract, the city will have to go to the department of public works for the expense of several thousand dollars for work in connection with the underpass which is not included in the contract.

He issued orders Friday to the effect that all number plates on cars be so placed as to be easily seen and he especially ordered that speeders be arrested.

Many New Entries in Game To Win Cabinet Phonographs

Additional impetus was given The Constitution's great free Gibson cabinet phonograph offer Friday by entrance of a large number of workers who took the field determined to win the handsome prize offered.

Still others who have failed to enter promptly are slated to either bring or send their entry blanks to The Constitution circulation department today and join in the movement which will bring music and all of its pleasures into hundreds of homes heretofore unsupplied with phonographs.

Awarding of a handsome Gibson cabinet phonograph—the tried and tested product of a veteran phonograph manufacturer—is to be done absolutely free of charge to any person who secures twelve new 15-week subscriptions to The Daily and Sunday Constitution.

Friends of the many workers so far enrolled are rallying to their aid, and reports from prospective owners of Gibson phonographs bear out the assertion that the handsome instrument will be exchanged for only a few hours of pleasant, easy work.

Workers have found that no salesmanship is needed in presenting their proposition, the worth of The Constitution as an unrivaled news medium having long been established.

"It's just a matter of telling your friends that you want them to subscribe to The Constitution," one worker explained. "They naturally subscribe or buy the paper on the street, and they are glad to enroll as regular subscribers in order to aid their friends."

Full details of the sensational Gibson offer are contained in an advertisement appearing elsewhere in this issue. Turn to it; read its provisions carefully, and then fill out your entry blank and lose no time in getting definitely into the game to win a handsome, elegant cabinet phonograph free of charge.

POTATOES TO REPLACE EXPENSIVE BEER MALT

Berlin, March 7.—Potatoes, in the near future, will play an important role in beer brewing. Professor Edmund Farow, of the Berlin Agricultural institute, in a lecture at the annual meeting of the German Agriculturalists' union, told his hearers that he had invented a brewing process which permitted replacing 30 per cent of expensive malt by dried potatoes. According to the professor, potatoes also can be employed in the de-alization process.

Wooden Wives

—By Laura Jean Libbey—

In a cheap hotel in the worst and most obscure part of Washington, Hugh Boyd was pacing up and down awaiting Marcelle's message with the greatest of impatience. Reardon, who had come on to Washington, sat by the window smoking.

The phone bell rang; Boyd was at the instrument with a bound, jerking down the receiver.

"It's all right," came Marcelle's voice cautiously. "I'll see that a certain party will be at the French hall at ten o'clock on the evening of the 22nd. Get your papers ready; she will sign."

CHAPTER XIV.

"Where you are liberal with your love and counsel."

"Be sure you are not loose; for those you make friends."

And give your hearts to, when they once perceive

The least rub in your fortunes, fall away

Like water from you, never found again,

But where they mean to sink ye."

During the fortnight Marcelle had been an inmate of Daniel Westlow's home she had left no stone unturned to make her presence there a cause for joy to him. They had long and earnest chats over the breakfast coffee, and here was the only welcoming smile he received when he put in his appearance at dinner. He was becoming used to Pauline's averted face and coldness of manner, though he did hope their guest would not notice it.

Immediately after dinner it was the custom of Pauline and Marcelle to repair to the library. If he put in an appearance, Pauline soon found an excuse to leave the room. Not so, Marcelle; she was sure to remain, always doing her best to make the evening pass pleasantly for him, which won her his sincere gratitude.

He had been drawn into joining several clubs, but he never went near any one of them. To Daniel Westlow there was no place like home, even though there was a note of discord in it. On one of these occasions, he looked up from his paper to observe Marcelle looking at him fixedly.

For some moments he was silent; then, in a shaking voice, he said:

"During the time you have been here with us, I think you must have noticed that there is an estrangement between Mrs. Westlow and myself."

"He looked at her wistfully, Marcelle nodded. "There never was a case like this in all the wide world. I assume you know the story from Pauline of our unusual courtship—and our marriage."

"You went on with evident embarrassment. Marcelle bowed her head in assent. "There is no need for me to go over that—except to add—I thought at the time I wedded my wife, that I—rough and smooth though I was—had won her love. I soon found out that she was so utterly dissatisfied with me, her feelings generated into actual dislike—and from that stage into intense hatred; yes, hatred. Miss Val-leau, I have done everything in God's world that a man could do to make her happy, but have failed—utterly, you see. I am as careful as to how I speak to her, I love my wife so much that I would lay down my life for her. I cannot fathom what I have—or have not done—which has caused her to become so bitter toward me. You would render me a favor, make me your debtor while I live, if you could only find out from her just what her grievance toward me is—that I might do everything in my power to rectify it. You are a young lady of intelligence, and sound judgment—will you tell me what you think is the reason for my wife's aversion to me?—I cannot stand this sort of a thing much longer; it is eating like a canker into my heart."

"You say you discovered, after marriage, that your wife had no love for you," pursued Marcelle thoughtfully.

"That is the case," he admitted regretfully. "Matters are going from bad to worse; I am terrified by the constant thought she is thinking of leaving me. Our estrangement will soon become public gossip."

"You can think of reason whatever for having brought this state of affairs between you—about?" she queried.

"None whatever," he repeated earnestly.

"No wife ever turned against her husband—without a cause," declared Marcelle, inquiring in the next breath—

"Did Pauline ever have a love affair, young though she was—before she met you?"

"She said Daniel Westlow gave a great start, clutch the arms of his chair in a tight grip. It was fully a moment ere he answered—"Yes," adding quickly—"It was only a girl's fancy on her part; she was thrown in contact with a scoundrel—a blackguard. His good looks was a passport to favor. He was soon shown up in his true colors. The shock must have been true to her; but she forgot him, I feel sure."

Marcelle rose slowly, saying: "I hope you will pardon me if I err in my judgment—but I think you have struck at the root of the trouble—an old lover. I am a woman, and I know what I am talking about. Mr. Westlow—a woman seldom, or never forgets an old lover, her first lover. All of a sudden memory may recall him—she yearns for him, and, with thinking and yearning, her heart's love goes back to him. She grows to detect any one who stands between them."

"In his room in the cheap lodging house, Boyd and Reardon were discussing the matter with gusto—though the hour was long past midnight.

"This Val-leau girl you speak of is certainly a tramp to influence the senator's young wife to take foolishly steps of that kind; ten to one, when she has time to think it over, she will wish to appoint some other place—any other place than a masked ball."

"Marcelle Val-leau will hold her up to her promise, never fear," returned Boyd. "This, together with her secret longing to see me again, will fetch her."

"Now let us come to a full understanding in this matter," said Reardon. "I want to know just what I am to get out of it—I am a dangerous man to attempt to double-cross, you understand? What's my share in this deal?"

"For a full minute Boyd looked at him fixedly. Reardon took note of this.

"We have fixed up papers for her to sign, haven't we?" queried Boyd. Reardon nodded. Boyd went on slowly: "One is a deed for her western property—the whole of it—and the other—the divorce paper you fixed up to be your trump card, Reardon, in taking a most stupendous revenge upon Daniel Westlow for being the means of getting her distracted for a time from law practice. That ought to suffice you, as being your share in this affair."

"Satisfied revenge will not keep me eating," returned Reardon, "besides that, I want an equal division between you and me of the property that you will wheedle her into signing over. Understand that fairly, Boyd."

"We cannot afford to quarrel; no matter how hard you squeeze me when you find me in a tight place, I might have expected that from you, Reardon."

Pauline had watched the dawn break with a very troubled heart beating in her bosom. Despite Marcelle's assurance that her action in going to the French ball was quite all right under the circumstances, she felt unhappy over it.

She had loved Hugh Boyd with all the guileless love of an innocent girl's heart. Fate over which she had no control, had parted them just as surely as though one of them lay in the grave. She was now the wife of Daniel Westlow. No matter whom she married, she was bound to him by the ties of life, and he was—or what she had found out about him—which had killed her respect at one blow—she was still bound to him by shackles which would grip and hold her the rest of her life. Her past, with that sweet girlish love—and Hugh—belonged to the years that were one. She must take up the cross of her hapless married life, and bear it to the end.

Noon came—the hour of the afternoon sped swiftly by, and the shadows of night slowly gathered over the city. Daniel brought a friend home to dinner. Marcelle was at her brilliant best—fairly radiant—Pauline alone seemed distraught—only Daniel noticed it.

"I sent out for a costume, and was fortunate enough to secure the sweetest thing you ever saw; I'll bring it right in to you." She ran off to her room reappearing with a creation in white gauze, flung over her arm.

"Why, it's a ballet costume!" exclaimed Pauline.

"The most beautiful thing they had—in fact the only one they had left," announced Marcelle coolly.

"Hobson's choice, therefore, you must wear it—You ought to be glad that the man who adores you, and who is to see you for the last time, will be holding you looking like a fairy, a veritable dream of loveliness that will live in his memory—ever after."

"The—short-skirt!" gasped Pauline in consternation. "Oh, Marcelle! I—I—could not appear in it, believe me dear."

"You can indeed, and you must," declared Marcelle, bustling her into the abbreviated skirts. "You have never been to a French masked ball. Let me tell you every one of the young ladies will be there will be wearing just this sort of a costume, I assure you, therefore, you will not be noticed—you would raise no end of conjecture as to your identity, if you wore anything else."

Against her better judgment Pauline yielded to the stronger will of Marcelle.

"You are to meet him at ten—that is the hour it begins—it wants just twenty minutes to that time now. The taxi I engaged is waiting across the way."

CHAPTER XV.

"Love enthralls us until we love the chain."

And beauty's smile is worth a miser's gain;

Then hope is better than reality

And faith as boundless as the boundless sea.

While Pauline was still protesting she ought not to go to the French ball, Marcelle wrapped her own long, dark, enveloping cloak about her, hustled her down to the main hall without being observed by any of the servants, and out of the door into the waiting cab.

A few minutes later the taxi turned into a side street, stopping at length before a lighted building into which every crowd of men and young girls were making their way.

Before Pauline had time to think, the door was opened by a very polite man who whispered, rather than asked aloud: "The lady Mr. Boyd was expecting."

He bowed respectfully, conducting her to the farthest end of the room, to a small booth separated from the ballroom by draped French and American flags intertwined. In an instant Boyd was at her side, his hands clasped both of hers. His dark eyes looking down into her own with their old-time magic spell.

"Oh, Pauline!—forgive me, I cannot call you anything else—it was good of you to come. Heaven has indeed answered my prayer—I am at a loss—that is—I cannot find words in which to thank you."

By a tremendous effort Pauline rained something like composure. She drew her hands from his clinging clasp, answering: "The noble object in which you are interesting yourself—trying to bring relief into the lives of the suffering children of the poor, by obtaining play grounds for them, is the heat of the coming summer upon them—is sufficient—reason—as to why I am here—to do my share—to aid you—in the noble work you have undertaken—Mr.—Boyd."

He was a master hand at acting; he tried to utter the name, when she saw those tears, but it stuck in her throat. He noted her evident confusion.

"If you will take this seat,—your back to the curtain, you could remove your mask—You will do this, Pauline; I ask it—not as a request—but a prayer to you—that I may look on your face, the dearest the world ever held for me—or will hold, while my life lasts."

There was a tiny table in the booth—she took off the mask and laid it down upon it. She did not look up to meet his gaze which she knew was fixed with a burning intensity upon her—she could hear his deep drawn sighs—and she was sorer than ever that she came.

"I think you more than words express," he whispered hoarsely, brokenly.

She was frightened at the mood which she found him. What it should attempt to take her in arms and kiss her, as he had done many a time before—when they were betrothed lovers—all forgetful of the gulf which separated them now. Somehow, she could not tell just what or in what way—but this man, standing before her, in appearance slight, disheveled, and clothes a bit shabby seemed strangely at variance with the natty, immaculate Hugh Boyd, who had caught and held her girlish fancy in those other days.

Druid Hills Club Is Scene Of Brilliant Sorority Dance

Outstanding among the social events of Friday's calendar and of particular interest to the college set was the formal dance given at the Druid Hills Golf club by the members of the Phi Pi sorority of Washington seminary.

The hostesses of the occasion were the twenty-five members of the sorority. Receiving the guests in the spacious lounge of the club were the officers, who are Miss Irene Thomas, president; Miss Palmer Dallas, vice-president; Miss Sarah Hurt, secretary-treasurer.

The club was elaborately decorated for the occasion in palms, ferns and spring flowers, which featured the sorority colors of purple and gold.

Parma violets were attractively combined with jonquils and callendulas in baskets and urns placed throughout the lounge and other rooms where the guests were received. In the ballroom streamers of purple and gold festooned the ceiling lights and hung from the walls. A large Phi Pi banner was suspended at one end of the room across the orchestra balcony and extending from this were purple and gold ribbons.

The Metropolitan theater orchestra furnished an excellent program of dance music during the evening. One of the features of the occasion was the grand march, during which lovely favors were distributed to the guests.

White ivory combs in white kid cases, which were stamped in gold with the letters of the sorority, were given to the girls. The boys were presented with cigarette cases of brown leather bearing the sorority letters in gold.

Supper was served buffet style at 11:30 o'clock.

Miss Thomas, who acted as official hostess of the occasion, was beautifully gowned in green georgette with trimmings of silver and green lace. She wore a corsage bouquet of sweetheart roses and lilies of the valley.

Four hundred members of the college set and the younger society contingent were the invited guests.

HEARTS AFIRE

BY MAY CHRISTIE

The Brilliant Novelist of Modern Society

INSTALLMENT 66.

"How Do You Account for this?"

In the girl's character, there was an indomitable "something" which will rise to meet emergencies, no matter how amazing may the latter be.

Now—was Virginia Dale's eyes glared upon her in the eerie lantern light—that "something" came to the surface in the younger woman, so that she didn't scream, or faint, or run away, or do any of the foolish, so-called "feminine" things that a heroine of romance is supposed to do, in the astounding circumstances.

She stood her ground.

"Come out, you spy!" hissed Virginia, holding the lantern up, so that its rays fell full on Prudence.

The latter stepped forward, her footfalls making a crackling sound in the undergrowth.

An owl hooted eerily at that moment, and for a fantastic second it flitted through Prudence's mind the Virginia—distorted with rage and with frustrated scheming—was a witch, there in the queer shadows of the wood, behind the lantern's flitting light!

The digging implements were a broomstick, a broomstick? Would she fly off, over the tree tops, and join that hooting owl amid the outer darkness?

"How dare you spy on me?" hissed Virginia, her eyes narrowed to a pinpoint, like a dangerous cobra that is going to strike. "How dare you snoop on my track, you—you woman!"

Prudence met the venomous glare.

"I dare anything for the restoration of my own good name," she answered in a measured tone that gave no hint of fear. "A great light was shining on her spirit. The diamond earrings and the money found in her sash."

Virginia had worn the gown before she did, that catastrophe night! Virginia had left the stolen goods there, perhaps through carelessness, perhaps through deliberate wish to blacken her rivals' character and chances.

Bert Traymore had been innocent—no one but Virginia had been to blame.

"Your good name? Faugh!" Virginia burst into horrible laughter that had no slightest sound of mirth about it, only hysteria. "Who in the world cares what a—common nobody like you does, or says?"

For answer, Prudence, in a low, resolute tone, continued:

"Calling me names won't mend this matter. I've seen what I have seen, over there," she nodded into the darkness in the direction of the tree—and I ask you what you are doing, hiding Mrs. Vansittart's property—her lost property, for I recognized the gold candlesticks, and several other things in the boxes—out here in this solitude?"

Virginia gave a high, angry laugh that again had the hysterical note about it.

"A cheat like you dares to call me to account?"

"I do, I shall not move from here until you give an explanation."

"Ha! Ha! You won't? Well, see about that!" And Virginia took a furious step towards the speaker, arm upraised, and something gleaming ominously in it.

"I shouldn't advise you to use violence," went on the cool, unafraid voice of the younger girl, standing immobile on the spot. "If you injured me—if you even killed me, here where we stand—it would be the ruin of you, and you know it. Our footsteps are already all over the moon and moss, and there wouldn't be the slightest difficulty in the police tracking you."

Police?

Virginia, deeply as she loathed this clear-eyed girl, shivered at the hateful word.

"I ask you!" persisted the quiet, resolute young voice. "I ask you to explain why you are hiding Mrs. Vansittart's gold candlesticks and other property which I recognize, here in this wood in a box?"

"You can ask till doomsday," hissed Virginia, frowning again getting the upper hand. "You can."

The words died on her lips, for in Prudence's eyes she saw a something that frightened her—a something strong as granite, pure with the brightness of an unclouded spirit, untroubled by any unlovely spirit, untroubled by any unlovely spirit.

ANOTHER CASE MADE UNDER TOBACCO LAW

Another case against a local retailer of cigars and cigarettes charging violation of the new state tobacco tax law, was filed Friday by C. Grover Bell, deputy in the revenue commissioner's office, against F. C. Worthy, colored, of 136 Auburn avenue.

Worthy was caught selling cigarettes and cigars without any state revenue stamps attached, although he was charging his customers the price of the stamp with every sale, it is charged. He had no stamps on his premises, except two, of total value of 3 cents, attached to a $5 box of cigars.

This is the fourth case of this character made locally since the state tobacco tax law went into effect on January 1. Worthy's case is set for hearing in the municipal court.

Mr. Bell stated that the cases brought are having a salutary effect. He stresses, however, the fact that numerous dealers are not observing that clause in the law which calls for cancellation of all stamps before they are affixed to the goods to be sold.

BOUDOIR MIRRORS OF WASHINGTON

Supreme Court Wives Capital's Social Anchors

MRS. W. H. TAFT

(Copyright, 1924, in U. S. and Canada, by Women's News Service, Inc. Reprinted exclusively by the North American Newspaper Alliance.)

So many have come from Main street, but not Mrs. William Howard Taft. The daintiest of Cincinnati's Main street had been left behind at the multiple age and before she was born of her teens she had learned the ways of social Washington with its barbs and wiles and red tape entanglements.

"She didn't climb the wire fence, but as a white house guest during the Hayes administration she walked in the front door. She was Helen Herrington, and her father was the law partner of Rutherford B. Hayes."

Law ran in both families. A superior court judge in Cincinnati at 29, that's what happened to Taft, and his wife didn't altogether object. Of course she was immensely proud, but she seemed afraid that contact with older men and the serious side of life would rob him of his youth and buoyancy. If you could hear him laugh today you would realize it was a false alarm.

After her husband's election to the presidency, Mrs. Taft seemed to retire from politics and was submerged in refurbishing and furnishing the white house. I have an idea that the contents of the attic were greatly increased after that advent.

What! Haven't you heard of the famous attic? My dears, it's a perfect treasure house of antiques. Old furniture and rare pieces of discarded by the new-coming presidents to make way for modern designs. No woman living but who would love to rummage in it!

Let me see. I think it was Hiram Johnson who has bought that delightful old manor house outside the district boundary. It was in a shocking state of repair, and they began to re-stain the floors and paint the walls. But one old fireplace was missing and a gaudy modern mirror shrieked its incongruity to high heaven. It was a long search; then one day an old gardener or janitor or something about the capitol, by chance, hearing of the senator's dilemma, offered an old fireplace that had long ago been discarded from the white house as junk and assure you, it is a veritable treasure.

Her Music Draws Opponents. Mrs. Taft's outstanding personal accomplishment is her gift for music. I believe that Victor Berenger, an apostate to the socialist party because of the lure of this music, which accompanied the gracious hospitality of the white house.

Whatever that message may be, these gay pink blossoms turn the April breeze into petals like confetti on those who pass that way. Under the roof of Justice Holmes abides Boston's best, the culture, the miles deep and literary atmosphere and all the surroundings that make a high-brow feel at home. Mrs. Holmes is an intellectual woman and absolutely without personal vanity. No woman with a spark of it would do her hair in the Holmes way—a little knob screwed up at the back of one of the best brains in Washington.

There is Mrs. Louis Brandeis—easily one of the most outstanding ladies of the supreme court group. She is handsomely and gracefully good complexion, and snow white hair. And she carries herself well. What should that be? Isn't she of the TIE? Goldmark's family that has given Pauline and Josephine Goldmark to the world, besides Mrs. Brandeis. Hers is a justifiable pride. She has two daughters, both good feminists.

Running true to tradition, Susan Brandeis worked for suffrage after she graduated and she is now practicing law in New York. You know Elizabeth is executive secretary of the Minimum Wage Commission of the District of Columbia. When the minimum wage law in the district was declared unconstitutional, by a local court, it went to the supreme court. The body will be taken to what Judge Brandeis would do and how he would vote. But he declined to sit. He had previously argued a similar case and his sympathies were well known. He calls it a matter of ethics. But I think the labor people say it was mere etiquette.

The Brandeis' home is the storm center of the socially elite. If you want your Washington all jazzed up you don't go there. It is the socially minded people—men and women—who care how the other half live, and why they don't live longer and more happily—these are the people you meet. They are interesting men and women; and when they speak you not only agree with them but their remarks are well worth listening to.

Lion hunting isn't a Brandeis pastime but the really big game generally get around their presence sooner or later. Of course you find people who try to sneak up in the night and hang a red flag over the door. Cochran isn't brewed in the cellar. The reddest thing in the Brandeis household is the warm glow of human sympathy and understanding.

Ladies of fluffy ruffles, lounge liards and all the rapid, brainless excitement chasers, go round the block. But if you realize life, in its best, broadest sense, just go in.

And then there are the Sutherlands who come from Utah! Yes, they are Gentiles. That is the first question asked about the newly-arrived from Utah. After Senator Sutherland retired from the senate they left Washington. It has grown a big city since then and the war has made many changes. Supreme court justice is a life job, and I think the Sutherlands are preparing to dig themselves in comfortably and we should feel their presence in society.

Tomorrow: Cabinet Wives.

PLAN JEWISH STATE IN NORTHERN CRIMEA

London, March 7.—It is stated in Jewish circles here that an autonomous Jewish region will be established in northern Crimea and adjacent districts in the Ukraine, including the cities of Odessa, Kherson and Nikolaev, where the populations are predominantly Jewish.

The project, which it is proposed to give an independent Jewish administration by about 1927 comprises approximately 14,000,000 acres, of which 2,000,000 have been unutilized and unpopulated. The diplomatic correspondent of The Daily Telegraph, hears that the soviet leaders Trotsky, Bucharin and Kamenef, favor the scheme which is declared in some, as suggested in some quarters, a revival of the Czarist system of the "pale."

Moscow dispatches on February 29 said a final decree establishing an autonomous Jewish state in the Crimean peninsula would be issued within a few days by the council of commissars. The state, it was added, would be established along the same lines as all other autonomous regions which the soviet government had created for minority nationalities of the Russian population.

Washington, March 7.—Fausto Davila, representative here of the Honduran nationalist party, whose forces are led by General Tiburcio Carias, announced today that the de facto government cause in that country had collapsed and that he had been summoned to a conference at Tegucigalpa, the capital of Honduras, where, he said, arrangements are to be made to establish a new government.

The military chiefs, he added, were to confer with the object of setting up a provisional government which would be followed by one of the nationalist party.

Davila, who is a former foreign minister and also a former minister of Washington from Honduras, left tonight for New Orleans from where he will sail for Puerto Cortes.

TWO AMERICANS HAVE THRILLING ADVENTURE

Canton, January 17.—(By Mail to the Associated Press.)—Two Canton Americans, Dr. W. W. Sudbury, of Philadelphia, and S. E. Spencer, Jr., son of Senator Spencer, of Missouri, have just completed a hazardous trip to the new leper colony in the Pirate Isles south of Macao, in the course of which they were held up by armed desperados, given a tea party by natives, and forced to battle adverse conditions of wind and sea.

The dangerous expedition into the heart of the section occupied by the bandits who have terrorized China's coast shipping many years, was made at the instance of the American mission to lepers.

RUMOR OF CONFERENCE IN EUROPE UNFOUNDED

Washington, March 7.—Another report that an economic conference may be called soon in Europe went the rounds of Washington today, but found no confirmation in any official quarters.

It was said for President Coolidge that he had no information on the subject.

WALTON ANNOUNCES IN RACE FOR SENATE

Bokchito, Okla., March 7.—J. C. Walton, depositor governor, has announced his candidacy for the United States senate.

PRESENT REGISTRATION STANDS FOR PRIMARY

Present registration lists will decide March 19, irrespective of whether what voters are qualified to vote in the presidential preferential primary the voter has paid his 1923 taxes, according to a ruling made Friday by Attorney General George M. Naper. The ruling was addressed to Charles E. Martin, chairman of the Clarke county democratic executive committee, of Athens.

The attorney general held that the Georgia law does not disqualify a man from voting until his taxes are six months delinquent. The final day for paying taxes in Georgia was December 21.

The attorney general also refers to Code Section 127, which provides that "any political primary election held by any political party... shall be presided over and conducted in the manner and form prescribed by the rules of the political party" etc. He states from this fact that the rules of the political party, or its executive committee would, therefore, control if not in conflict with the provisions of the law.

NEW PANAMCO GAS STATION OPENS TODAY

A new Panamco Gasoline and Oil Service station will open in Buckhead today. Through a clerical error an advertisement was inserted in Friday's Constitution announcing the opening on Friday. This new station will give a gallon of free motor oil to each purchaser of five or more gallons of Panamco Gas at the opening.

Following the announcement appearing Friday morning, officials of the Atlanta office, arranged immediately to provide the free oil for those customers who called for it Friday in order to "make good to the letter" with the many local users of their gasoline.

This step is considered unusual with business organizations, as the error was not the fault of the station and technically there was no obligation to provide free oil Friday.

However, the fact that some of their customers received the benefit of this free offer Friday, will in no way offset the station's loss of a day's business. The station, according to local officials who state that all customers who purchase five gallons of gasoline from the new station today will receive their free oil.

Spanish Composer Is Dead After Fall Of Fifteen Stories

New York, March 7.—Dr. Carlos de Mandil, composer and orchestra leader, formerly of San Francisco, fell or jumped to his death from the roof of a 15-story apartment building, on West End avenue today.

Dr. de Mandil, who was 31 years old, was said to be a member of the Spanish nobility, having come to this country several years ago as Count Mateo Carlos de Mandil. He was a violinist and orchestral leader at the Alhambra hotel.

On entering the apartment house elevator, Dr. de Mandil told the operator that he wanted to go to the roof to take a picture of a new hotel building under way. The operator, reported he had said to him on leaving the elevator:

"May God bless you."

The musician's note addressed to his wife which the police refused to make public.

Air Speed Record From McCook Field To Mineola Broken

Mineola, N. Y., March 7.—Speed records between McCook field, at Dayton, Ohio, and Mitchell field were broken today when Lieutenant E. H. Barksdale, pilot, and Captain Bartley Jones, navigator, flew a De Havilland navigation plane from Dayton to the field here in three hours and 33 minutes. The former record was established in January, 1923, and was four hours and four minutes.

The official air line distance between McCook field and Mitchell field is 575 miles. The distance was covered at a rate of almost 2.47 miles an hour—approximately 148 miles an hour.

Barksdale and Jones "hopped off" at 12:27 o'clock, central standard time, landing at the field here at 5:20 o'clock eastern time.

Foot and low-hanging clouds forced the airmen to fly low for a large part of the distance and they said they had several narrow escapes from striking trees and chimneys. The flight was made almost entirely by compass. Until reaching western Pennsylvania they maintained an altitude of about 12,500 feet. Helped along by a tail wind, the plane traveled at a speed of almost three miles a minute during the first 90 minutes of the flight, it was estimated.

Both the fliers were almost numb from cold when they stepped from the plane. They were greeted by Major William N. Hensley, Jr., commandant at Mitchell field.

The record broken by Barksdale and Jones was made by Lieutenant Alexander Pearson and had stood against a number of attempts to lower it.

POLICE ARE GIVEN 4 DAYS TO SOLVE DUFFY MURDERS

Chicago, March 7.—Police today were given four days in which to find more complete evidence in their searching for the solution of the double slaying of John Duffy, alias Daugherty, and his wife, Maybelle Exley Duffy, or Joe, William Engleke, the most important witness found so far.

Superior Judge Joseph B. David, in continuing the hearing on a petition for habeas corpus, gave police until Tuesday to obtain more complete evidence against Engleke or dismiss the charges of murder against him.

During the hearing Engleke took the stand and told of being with Duffy when he quarreled and shot his wife.

NEW ELECTRO-MAGNET AT GRADY SUCCESSFUL

This magnet is installed in the new clinic.

JUDGE MACK TO SPEAK AT JEWISH TEMPLE

Judge Julian W. Mack, of New York city, will address the Open Forum meeting at the Temple, South Prvor and Richardson streets, at 11:15 o'clock Sunday morning. Judge Mack is a man of international reputation both as a jurist and a philanthropist.

During his years of residence in Chicago, he was closely in touch with Julius Rosenberg on the philanthropies in which Mr. Rosenberg participated. During the administration of President Taft, Judge Mack was appointed as a judge on the court of commissioners and displaying remarkable judicial ability when his court was dissolved, he was retained and given his present position, judge of the circuit court of appeals for the seventh district.

Judge Mack is unusually well versed in the conditions which prevail today in Palestine, having made several trips to the Holy Land. He recently returned from the Holy Land and will talk about conditions as he found them in Palestine.

MOTHER OF FIVE HELD ON CHARGE OF MAKING BOOZE

Mrs. G. V. Economy, 410 Glenn street, mother of five small children, was indicted Friday by the Fulton county grand jury on a charge of violating prohibition laws. She was taken into custody and removed to jail several days ago after discovery of a 100-gallon still in full operation in the house she owns. A. J. Smith, a bartender, who is said to have admitted the still belonged to him and to have stated that Mrs. Economy knew nothing of it, also was indicted. Both were indicted on two counts, one manufacturing and the other selling liquor.

Six others were indicted Friday on charges of liquor law violation. They were: G. E. Park and Archie Henderson, who were charged with having 19 quarts in a room at 65 1/2 Walton street; Alvin Wyatt, charged with manufacturing liquor at 342 North Adams street and possessing two gallons; J. C. Roberts, charged with manufacturing at 32 Garden street and possessing liquor; J. C. Hopkins, charged with possessing 14 pints at 74 and 76 Houston street.

SKIES TO BE FAIR IN ATLANTA TODAY SAYS FORECASTER

Fair weather will continue in Atlanta today at least, according to official prediction of C. E. von Hagen, in charge of the local weather bureau. It probably will be a trifle colder than Friday, however, though not enough to be uncomfortable.

Rain has fallen during the last 36 hours over Florida and south and southeast Georgia and the eastern parts of the Carolinas. Temperatures are lower generally over the country. Indications locally, however, are for a continuance of the fair weather with moderately cold temperature. The mercury is steadily hanging lower than normal for this time of the year.

The temperature at 7 o'clock Friday morning was 38 degrees, with 64 the highest point for the preceding 24 hours.

J. E. LOVELESS, 64, DIES AT RESIDENCE IN COLLEGE PARK

J. E. Loveless, 64, died Friday at his home, 220 West Cambridge avenue, College Park, after a long illness. Mr. Loveless was prominent in Atlanta labor circles, was state secretary of the Junior Order of United American Mechanics for fourteen years, and had been affiliated with that organization for 25 years.

He was born in Adairville in 1870, moving from there to Cartersville, and later settling in College Park.

In addition to his widow, he is survived by two sons, M. R. Loveless, of Atlanta, and H. P. Loveless, of Little Rock, and a daughter, Mrs. A. C. Bearden. Funeral arrangements will be announced later by A. C. Hemperley.

HOLD ANNUAL X-COUNTRY RUN AT GEORGIA TECH TODAY

BY JOHN STATION.

This afternoon at 2 o'clock sharp the great athletic classic, the cross-country run, will get under way. The preparations have been made in the desire to make this Tech's most auspicious cross-country run.

About 1:45 o'clock Coach Alexander will call the runners together and give them the final instructions as to the course, method of finishing, and so forth. Then, promptly at the appointed hour, or otherwise, he will fire the pistol that sets the men on their "horses."

Before the race each of the runners is equipped with a tag, on which he prints his name, class, fraternity, club and other information useful in compiling the score.

The men have these tags pinned to some member of the Kappa club at the waterworks, and terminal of the run. At the finish, these punched tags are collected in order and the composite score made up.

The latest announcement from the Kappa club is that they have received pledges for one hundred and fifty cakes. This means that the first one hundred and fifty men to finish will be given a cake, a reward well worth the run. Last year one hundred and twenty-five cakes were given away.

It has been decided to keep the runs open for about 30 minutes after which time they will be closed and others desiring to finish must do so via the grandstand.

There is great possibility of the record being smashed this afternoon. The best time for the three and one-half miles distance so far is the record of Horace Moore, set in 1922. Horace stepped over the distance in 18 minutes, 55 seconds.

Last year Lindsay Roberts, who was second in 1922, negotiated the span from Tech to the waterworks and back in 19 minutes, 12 seconds. Last year it should be remembered that a heavy rain fell right up to the time of the race.

Young Semi-Pro Makes Impression

New York, March 7.—Walter James, semi-pro outfielder from Hollywood, Cal., has made a strong impression on Manager McGraw in his work with the New York Giants at St. Louis.

James was "discovered" by Bill Lutz, who "covered" George Kelly and Jimmy O'Donnell.

Dispatches today quoted McGraw as describing James as "a good player, but I hope he is."

Two mixed times, one captured by Hughes Jennings and the other by Cozy Dalrymple, played a 1-1 six inning yesterday.

Emil Meusel, Frank Snyder and Virgil Barnes signed contracts yesterday.

The chief excitement in the Yankee camp at New Orleans was the signing of Herb Pennock and announcement that Babe Ruth, having recovered from influenza, would arrive from Hot Springs with Scott, Schang, Hoyt and Bush.

Y. "Red" Tilton Johnson is the second Brooklyn infielder to be signed by the Yankees at Clearwater, Fla. He sprained his right ankle in sliding yesterday in a game between the regulars and a team of unknown players.

Another infielder, was hit in the eye by a grounder last Tuesday. Johnson may be idle a week.

Leagues To Join Amateur Union

There will be a meeting of the members of the Spaulding baseball league next Thursday night at 8 o'clock, at A. G. Spaulding Co., 74 N. Broad street, for the purpose of organizing the league this season.

There is one place vacant in the new league and any strong amateur desiring to become a member can communicate with H. G. Voorhis at A. G. Spaulding & Co.

At the same time of the meeting of the Spaulding league, a new Dixie league will be formed provided there are enough teams to make applications for the organization.

Both of the leagues will become members of the new Atlanta Amateur Baseball association under the auspices of the Junior Chamber of Commerce.

Petition Meyers To Coach Centre

Danville, Va., March 7.—A petition signed by 32 Centre college football players asking Robert L. Meyers, president of the Centre Alumni association, and former assistant coach, to become head mentor of its playing columns has been sent to Myers at Chicago, where he is one of the present in chautauque work. Centre is seeking a coach to fill a vacancy caused by the resignation of "Uncle Charlie" Moran, who went to Bucknell college.

RUTH IS RECOVERED; PLAYS ROUND OF GOLF

Hot Springs, Ark., March 7.—Thirty-six holes, over the Hot Springs golf and country club links constituted a day's work for "Babe" Ruth, the Yankee slugger, who has been ill of influenza for the past 10 days. Ruth played a foursome with Shawker, Bush and Schang. Although he would not reveal his score, it was said to be "very good" and his driving received much favorable comment in the clubhouse.

The "Babe" is still weak from the latest attack of his "flu" but otherwise he appeared none the worse for his brief illness.

JOE LYNCH STARTS TRAINING FOR BOUT

New York, March 7.—Joe Lynch, lightweight champion, started training today for his title battle with Ed Goldstein, New York challenger, at Madison Square Garden March 21.

Lynch now weighs 130 pounds and faces a stiff conditioning schedule to make the title fight of 118 pounds. Al Pettinelli, southern bantamweight, and Johnny Keiser, have been added to his sparring staff at training quarters near Nyack, N. Y.

Peer's Hair Is Ring

Oxford, March 7.—Another peer's hair has just made a successful appearance in the boxing ring. This is Viscount Knebworth, heir to the Earl of Lytton, who represented Oxford University recently in the welterweight competition and knocked out his London university opponent.

Miss Collett Is Winner of Meet

Belleair Heights, Fla., March 7.—Miss Collett, of Providence, R.I., won the Belleair women's golf championship tournament today, defeating Mrs. Dorothy Campbell Hurd, of Merion Cricket, 3 and 2, in the final round. The match was close and exciting. Miss Collett was one down at the turn, but a birdie 3 on the twelfth squared the match. She won the fourteenth also, where Mrs. Hurd took three putts.

At the short fifteenth both played into a ditch and lost a stroke each. Miss Collett won the hole with a five. The match ended on the sixteenth. The hole measures 540 yards, but Miss Collett was on the green in two and sank the putt for a birdie three, the first three ever known to have been made on this hole. This was the fourth tournament Miss Collett has won in the south this winter.

Both Miss Collett and Mrs. Hurd were out in 40, with Mrs. Hurd leading by one hole. Miss Collett's score was 78 and Mrs. Hurd's 84.

The order of the first seven men finishing last year was Roberts, Cooper, Barton, Barrett, "Mule" Daves, Homer Carter and Phil Naramore. According to the dope, then Cooper should be the man slated for first place in this year's race. Roberts is not allowed to compete.

But Cooper won his letter in track last year, and a varsity track man is not allowed to compete. So, according to the dope, Barton should fall next in line. However, general opinion seems to favor either Goodhorn or Barrett as the winner. Both these boys have been training for the cross-country for a month and over, and both are in perfect condition for it. They have been covering the course under twenty minutes in their trial runs, and have not been forced to extend themselves to the limit.

From the standpoint of the public, one beauty of the cross-country lies in the fact that admission to this important sporting event is absolutely free. The gates of Grand field are thrown wide open, and anyone who wishes may come in and take a look. It is going to be a great run, and begins at 2 o'clock sharp.

The gates of Grand field are thrown wide open, and anyone who wishes may come in and take a look. It is going to be a great run, and begins at 2 o'clock sharp.

But Cooper won his letter in track last year, and a varsity track man is not allowed to compete. So, according to the dope, Barton should fall next in line. However, general opinion seems to favor either Goodhorn or Barrett as the winner. Both these boys have been training for the cross-country for a month and over, and both are in perfect condition for it. They have been covering the course under twenty minutes in their trial runs, and have not been forced to extend themselves to the limit.

MORRIS IS SANE, DOCTORS CLAIM

Texarkana, Ark., March 7.—Harry N. Morris is mentally able to take care of himself, according to the testimony of Dr. C. C. Kirk, of Little Rock, former superintendent of the Arkansas state hospital for nervous diseases and witness here today for the government in the hearing on the demerita praxosa plea of Morris, who is seeking indefinite postponement of the prosecution against him on charges of using the mails to defraud and conspiracy on the ground that he is mentally and physically unable to make an adequate defense.

Dr. Kirk testified that Morris told him during the examination that he was not worried over financial matters, but infatuation with a girl in New York was the cause of his mental distress. Major E. P. Bledsoe, of the Fort Logan H. Root hospital, at Little Rock, and Dr. H. H. Smiley, of Texarkana, the other two members of the medical board who examined Morris for the government, will be placed on the stand tomorrow.

For the defense on the hearing today Dr. R. C. Garrett, of Shreveport, the Morris family physician; Dr. J. E. Young, of Shreveport; Dr. R. E. Rowland, of Little Rock, and Dr. W. L. Valison, of Fort Worth, testified that Morris' mental condition now is such that he should not be required to

Habeas Corpus Battle Started By H. H. Chaffin

Habeas corpus proceedings to free H. H. Chaffin, held on a charge of suspicion in connection with the alleged suicide of Parks Sewell, said to have shot himself February 29 at his residence, 20 Boulevard Circle, were instituted Friday afternoon in Fulton superior court.

Hearing on the petition has been set for 10 o'clock Saturday morning before Judge E. V. Thomas. The petition charges that Chaffin is illegal in custody, that he is innocent of the crime of which he is accused, and that he is entitled to his liberty.

Operatives from the office of Solicitor General John A. Quinn, who are investigating the case of Chaffin, who was arrested Thursday, Sewell was found dead in his home by Chaffin. A pistol bullet had passed through his brain. Mrs. Sewell and Chaffin were at the home at the time, and both declared Sewell had ended his own life.

Following receipt of an anonymous letter Thursday, Chief of Police James L. Beavers ordered Chaffin's arrest. The letter, Chief Beavers stated, asked for an investigation of Sewell's death. Thursday night Mrs. Sewell and Miss Margaret Sewell were subjected to examination. Mrs. Sewell was reported Friday night to have suffered a complete nervous collapse and was confined to her bed.

Boarded With Sewells.

Chaffin, who is being held at police station, declares that he was in the backyard of the home at the time Sewell was shot, and that Mrs. Sewell was in the front yard.

According to Fleecie Miner, special investigator for Solicitor Boykin, Chaffin has been a boarder in the Sewell home for several years. Chaffin was employed at night while Sewell's occupation kept him downtown during the day. On the day of the tragedy, however, Sewell appeared at home. Mrs. Sewell and Chaffin are unable to explain this occurrence.

Chaffin declares that he did not hear the report of the pistol, but returning to the house from the backyard found Sewell dead upon the floor. He notified Mrs. Sewell, who was in the front yard, and they then called an undertaker.

"I didn't think it necessary to call the police at the time," Chaffin is quoted as saying.

Both Mrs. Sewell and Chaffin informed investigators that Sewell was in ill health and had been dependent over the fact, Chaffin exhibited a card with an Atlanta man's name on it who he declared would testify that Sewell had expressed intentions of committing suicide.

New developments in the case are expected to be brought to light Saturday by police authorities, though little information concerning their investigation was forthcoming Friday.

Speakers Back
Salary System
At Women's Meet

If the candidates for county officers who addressed the Atlanta League of Women Voters in the Chamber of Commerce building Friday afternoon should win out at the polls, the majority of Fulton county officers would be operated under the salary system after January 1, 1925.

The large majority of the thirteen candidates, each of whom made three-minute addresses, expressed themselves as being unreservedly in favor of abolishing the present fee system, and declared their intention of voluntarily operating under the salary system if elected.

Nearly all of the candidates answered in the affirmative to questionnaires sent out by the league regarding the fee and salary systems, among other things, the questionnaires asked whether, if elected, the candidate would voluntarily adopt the salary system, and whether he would deposit all funds over the salary to the credit of the taxpayers of Fulton county in the savings department of a reputable bank, regardless of whether the law is changed by the legislature.

Speakers were: W. H. Abbott, candidate for tax collector; Marvin P. Roane, candidate for election as tax collector; James H. Andrews, candidate for tax collector; George Goodhart, candidate for tax collector; J. W. Simmons, candidate for clerk of the superior court; James L. Beavers, candidate for clerk of the superior court; C. S. Robert, candidate for county surveyor; Roy Dorend, candidate for re-election as solicitor of the city court; John S. McClelland, candidate for solicitor of the city court; and Charles W. Wilkins, Claude L. Ashley and I. N. Ragsdale, all candidates for county commissioner.

Following the addresses the meeting was thrown open to questions, and several impromptu debates were staged between league members and candidates.

It was announced that J. W. Simmons and Thomas B. Miller, candidates for clerk of the superior court, and James L. Beavers and James L. Lowry, candidates for re-election as county court, will meet at 12:30 o'clock Tuesday at a luncheon of the league at the Peacock cafe, and that the candidates for county commissioner would be invited to meet at the body on the following Tuesday, March 12.

The league also announced a meeting for March 17, which only women attend, although all candidates may have women representatives. The meeting will be held at 4 p.m. at which the merging of city and county schools and possible increase in taxation will be discussed.
